Congressman Jeffords says:

Milk support reduction is 'go' for Dec. 1

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

STRASBURG — While glancing back more than two and one-half centuries at the Sixth Annual Century Farms Banquet at the Historic Strasburg Thursday night, Lancaster County's ag and business community took a deeper look at the more immediate past and the coming near future.

In a nutshell, here's some history and some history to-be-made that came out of the banquet:

–Ranking GOP member of the House Ag Committee and a dairyman, Congressman James M. Jeffords, of Vermont, stated emphatically that the 50-cent support price reduction will begin as scheduled on December 1.

–He also touched on a new grain program being considered in which farmers can buy back storage grain in exchange for cuts in acreage.

–And in the background of the current news making were the six Lancaster County families with Century Farms whose ag news-making has been up to 265 years in development.

Individual stories on the Century Farms are scattered throughout this week's issue of Lancaster Farming. See the Index on Page A3.

Featured speaker for the evening, Jeffords – one of the Republican survivors of the past election – took the mixed business

Dairy farmers petition for "50-cent" delay

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Write more. Milk less.

That was the nutshell message heard by about 30 York and Lancaster dairy farmers who turned out last Friday for a Pennsylvania Farmers' Union public alertedness concerning the proposed 50-cent-per-hundredweight milk price deduction to begin Dec. 1.

Before the meeting at the York Extension offices ended, most of the dairy farmers had affixed their signatures to a Congressional petition urging the passage of alternate dairy legislation.

Earlier in the week, National Farmers' Union representatives had delivered a stack of petitions, bearing more than 21,000 names, to the USDA offices of Secretary of Agriculture John Block. Details of that petition presentation, and other efforts by Farmers Union to thwart the dairy deduction to begin in two weeks, were given by the group's Washington lobbyist, Paul Sacia.

Also on hand for what had been billed a "protest" meeting were a trio of elected officials, York County state legislators Donald Dorr and A. Carvill Foster, and Lancaster County Commissioner Jim Huber. A representative for York County Commissioner Bill McKinley also attended.

Rep. Dorr read to the group a resolution adopted last week in the state House of Representatives. That resolution urged Congress to take action to delay implementation of the Dec. 1 assessment to allow the dairy industry and Congress sufficient time to develop a program to more realistically deal with the milk surplus.

Attorney Marian Furman, head of the Farmers' Union Political Action Committee, briefly reviewed the history of the dairy legislation passed in August, aimed at cutting milk surpluses and government purchases of dairy products through two increments of 50-cent deductions on the milk price.

In October 1980, support price for milk was frozen at $13.10 for five years. Farmers Union studies show the average blend price for milk at that time was $12.80, while cost of production was $11.80 per hundred, leaving a dollar margin.

By contrast, the cost of production for 1983 is estimated by Farmers' Union at $14.50 per hundred, and estimated-price after the two proposed 50-cent assessments is $11.80, a deficit per hundredweight of $2.70.

By law, the Dec. 1 assessment is to be triggered if the Community Credit Corporation buys 5 billion pounds of milk equivalent, a figure already surpassed. The second assessment of 50-cents, scheduled for April 1, 1983, will be triggered by a 7.5 billion pound CCC purchase. Market experts predict that purchases will exceed that limit,

Paul Sacia, Washington lobbyist for the National Farmers' Union, told farmers last Friday evening that national legislators are embarrassed by the dairy program calling for assessments and he predicts a "good chance" of a delay on the milk price deduction. Other participants in the protest meeting held in York County, seated at the head table from left, were: Al Garber, meeting chairman; Albert Bentz, York Co. Farmers' Union president; Attorney Marian Furman; and PFU Vice President Barbara Woods.

Johne's update, awards highlight Guernsey banquet

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

REFTON — Pending legislation in Wisconsin, regarding Johne's disease, may dictate the movement of cattle through that state, Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders business manager Lee Yost said Thursday.

In his address at the annual meeting of the Lancaster County Guernsey Breeders, Yost reported on an all-breed Johne's seminar, sponsored by the American Guernsey Cattle Club during the recent North American Livestock Exposition in Louisville, Ky.

"Everyone should take a hard look at this, regardless of breed," Yost said. "The biggest problem is getting farmers to admit they have it."

The disease is characterized by severe scouring and rapid loss of flesh terminating in prostration and death. Appetite remains good until the animal goes down and some animals may have intermittent diarrhea for a period of time.

According to a fact sheet provided by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the disease begins appearing in cattle at two years of age, peaks at three years and drops off rapidly with relatively few cases noted after five years of age.

The disease is spread by fecal contamination of feed and water and can be spread through natural

By Sheila Miller, Editor

Agriculture runs the country

"It's certainly a lot easier than shoveling," I thought as I watched the golden yellow ears of corn sliding out of the gravity wagon and onto an elevator. Memories of years past when backaches and blisters were the rewards of a bumper corn crop were gratefully exchanged for this year's more modern harvest techniques.

As the cobs tumbled and rolled over each other in their rush to be first into the waiting bin that was hurriedly makeshifted to hold our future cattle feed, it was encouraging to watch as the heap of corn grew higher and wider with each rattle of the elevator chain. But, with each load that lumbered in from field to waiting crib, the reality of what this record crop of corn will mean to farmers across the nation was only too apparent.

The latest USDA statistics show corn at a record high of 8.33 billion bushels — two percent above last year's harvest. The nation's 72.82 million acres of corn are estimated to yield an average 114.4 bushels per acre.

Here in Pennsylvania, which historically has been a corn deficit state, the story is not such a bountiful one, however. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture figures forecast corn for grain at 126.04 million bushels which is six percent below last year's harvest record. An average yield of 92 bushels per acre has been predicted on the state's 1.37 million acres.

But, despite Pennsylvania's cutback in corn production, the overall story is one of too much corn two years in a row with consequent drastic price reductions — not good news for farmers who count on converting their corn into cash directly and not through cattle or other livestock.

Late October Midwest corn prices fell to $1.86 a bushel, down from last year's $2.33 price and a far cry from 1980's $3.25 corn. It doesn't take much pencil pushing to realize farmers aren't going to get rich at today's market prices — in fact, we'll be lucky to break even.

The financial impact of this year's bin-busting harvest will be far-reaching. It may trigger overproduction in the already overflowing dairy industry. Cheap corn prices may find farmers jumping into the hog fattening business which will surely result in the finally profitable pork prices taking a dramatic plunge when these animals reach market weight.

Farmers who are looking to export deals to cure their ills will likely be suffering from maize migraines for quite some time, finding them as hard to capture as the elusive butterfly. USDA's most recent figures show corn exports down 16 percent in volume and down 34 percent in value.

As if our record crop wasn't bad enough, the slump in export trade over the past year or so has created a corn carryover crisis. Economists report stocks of corn spilling over from previous harvests in amounts reaching 2.37 billion bushels as of Oct. 1, 1982 — that's up 129 percent from the 1.03 billion bushels held last year at the same time. The result — no room in the bin for this year's corn harvest. Statistics show 61 percent of the carryover stock is still on the farm, up 193 percent from last October.

Looking ahead, some economists predict things are bound to get worse before they get better for corn growers. A carryover of nearly 3 billion bushels has been predicted for October 1983 — a figure far above previous records.

As US-USSR grain talks wait to be translated into substantial contracts by diplomats who hedge US farmers' futures, some farmers and legislators are trying to take concrete approaches to softening the corn surplus blow.

Jack Parsons, president of the National Corn Growers Association and a corn farmer from Wapello, Iowa, encourages fellow farmers to sign up in the 1983 production control program because of the "bleak outlook for corn prices in the 1983/84 season." Critical of USDA's 1982 acreage diversion program, Parsons is throwing his weight behind next year's 10 percent paid diversion and 10 percent acreage reduction plan which he said will provide more incentive for farmers to sign up in '83.

Parsons blamed the 1980 grain embargo for about 500 million bushels of lost corn exports to the USSR each year since the ineffective trade blockade was attempted by the Carter administration.

Earlier this fall, Iowa Congressman Berkley Bedell introduced legislation designed to help out distressed corn farmers. His bill, which was signed into law by President Reagan on Oct. 21, provides for surplus "agricultural commodities" to be converted into alcohol fuels. The Secretary of Agriculture now has the authority to make CCC stocks available for processing by alcohol fuel producers.

"This legislation allows us to strengthen our agricultural economy by removing surplus stocks as dampers on market prices while at the same time producing a usable fuel that saves the taxpayers' dollars for storage, transportation and related costs that would otherwise be spent on the surplus commodities," commented Bedell.

Well, we always knew agriculture is what keeps this country running. Now, if only we could make our prices jump the way the gasoline prices escalated over the past few years.

Psalms 105:7-15.

The story of Gideon is one of the most popular ones in the Old Testament. Even if we're a bit hazy of the details of the story, we know it is about one of God's great champions.

But, despite its great popularity, the story is often not as deeply understood as it should be. We are likely to become so engrossed in the rise of this particular champion of God that we miss the real significance of his story.

Let me spell it out: much more than a story about a great champion of God who lived thousands of years ago, this is a story about champions of God who are present — if unrecognized — today.

If The Lord Is With Us...

In a time when the Israelites have suffered greatly at the hands of the Midianites — a situation they have brought on themselves — they begin to grumble that God has failed to send them a champion as he has in the past. In other words, God is responsible for their plight, as they see it.

Thus when a messenger ("angel") of the Lord comes to chat with Gideon and says to him, "The Lord is with you, you mighty man of valor," Gideon is having none of it. "Pray, sir," he replies cynically, "if the Lord is with us, why then has all this befallen us? And where are all his wonderful deeds which our father recounted to us...?" (6:13).

I think that neither God nor his messenger blinked at the straightforward and blunt reply from Gideon. In fact, it might have been that honesty that attracted God to this man (who wouldn't have won any polls for "Most Likely to Succeed"). Gideon simply said openly what lots of other people were thinking. He was honestly puzzled by God's apparent failure to live up to his reputation. I think God has a special affection for those of his children who have the honesty to challenge his messengers with "If God is with us, then how come...?"

Do Not I Send You?

Actually, when we face God and his messengers with that kind of question, it gives him an opportunity to challenge us in turn. Gideon wanted to know where God's champion was and God countered by asking: "Do not I send you?"

Of course, Gideon resisted this as best he could: "Pray, Lord, how can I deliver Israel? Behold my clan is the weakest in Mannaseh, and I am the least in my family?" When faced with God's challenge we can always think of lots of reasons to refuse. And the assurance God gives Gideon is also the assurance he gives us: "But I will be with you..." It is God who makes us sufficient for our role as his champion.

The next time you find yourself saying or thinking, "Why doesn't someone do something about that?" take a good look for God's champion in your own mirror. He's there, if you really want to find him.

To Beware of Wild Birds

No doubt most livestock producers have faced the problem of wild birds during snow covered days. These birds come by the thousands and feed from the livestock bunks and feeders. They not only eat feed but their droppings present very unsanitary conditions for everyone. Also, since these birds fly from farm to farm, they are a definite source of spreading various diseases. Unfortunately, we do not have a real good cure for the problem. They can be screened out of confinement buildings. There is however, a pelleted feed available at some feed dealers that is effective on starlings. Some farmers suggest using a shallow pan with about a half inch of salt on the bottom with a thin layer of lard over the salt so as the bird pecks through the lard they pick up the salt. Also, some builders have a hanging bird perch with a built-in wick that contains bird repellent. Good luck.

To Order Small Fruit Plants Early

This may strike you as premature, but this is a good time to order small fruit plants for next spring. Although you won't put them in the ground until April, you should be flipping through catalogs now. Ordering early assures you a wide selection of the best varieties. Companies begin filling orders with their best stock...if you delay you could be stuck with what's left over. Ordering early also means you'll get your strawberries or blueberries or whatever at the best time to plant.

So, dig out those catalogs now...get your order in...and be prepared for delicious fruit from your planting.

To Recognize the Consequences of a Bumper Corn Crop

The price of corn is so low this year many farmers have decided to not sell. They plan to store as much as possible and wait until prices improve. It could be a long wait. Corn prices have fallen steadily for the past 3 years. In 1980 corn sold for $3.25 a bushel...today it's down to $1.86 a bushel...well below the cost of production.

Corn prices are so low because production has been so high. Two bumper harvests, back-to-back, have created the surplus problem. Farmers grew as much as they could because they thought the export market would not be satisfied. But the export market hasn't responded as expected. In fact, exports are down 15% from last year.

The domestic market won't provide much relief either. Meat producers continue to feed less livestock. This may change though, if producers take advantage of the low feed prices and expand herds. But this could put them in the same situation that the grain industry is suffering from now.

Today, corn farmers aren't even thinking about profits...they just hope to break even.

OUR READERS WRITE

Doggone bill

We read with interest the article in Lancaster Farming on page A36 of the Nov. 13 issue ("Ag legislation moves in lame duck session") on House Bill 2535, as well as the comments that legislator Vice Chairman Noah Wenger made concerning this bill.

Since our organization has been active since the early 1960s, we cannot support this bill for the following reasons:

- The Department of Agriculture's Dog Law Enforcement Bureau has been inconsistent for many years. A 60 percent license sale percentage is not very efficient.
- A budget of $2,250,000 yearly would be adequate to supply their needs. Since they sold 1,045,432 individual licenses and 1,604 kennel licenses in 1981, why would they need a 500 percent increase? A $1 or $2 increase per individual license would suffice.
- It seems to be their intent to fund the SPCA and humane groups with this 500 percent increase. We have no quarrel with any of these groups, but a private organization should not be funded with state monies. Who will be the next to ask for the same thing?
- The sporting dog people (the beaglers, foxhound coon hound and bird doggers, and the working terrier group) have had no input into this bill whatsoever. We just might also be the largest continuous license buying block in the state who had no consideration.

We also feel the puppy mill issue is just a smoke screen and the real issue in House Bill 2535 is for the SPCA and humane groups in the continuous funding they so much desire. Remarks made by James C. Greenwood (R-143rd), chief sponsor of House Bill 2535, and those of other concerned individuals to the Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee on Tuesday, Nov. 9, bear this out.

Since Lancaster County has been the hub of most of this controversy, finished for this year. I also know that every farm has machinery that needs repair and service. If you are planning to have this done at your machinery dealer, it would be wise to contact him in the near future so it's on his work schedule. I'm aware of the spring rush next March and April; and I know your local service man will appreciate the work during the fall and into the long winter days. It can also save time in case parts need to be ordered to complete the job. The objective is to be planning for this repair work now. Have it done so you're machinery is ready to go early next spring.

Rep. Hayes speaks at PennAg legislative workshop

HARRISBURG — PennAg Industries Association sponsored their legislative workshop on Tuesday here at the Holiday Inn. Taking time out of his busy schedule to speak to th ,roup was House Majority Lead Samuel E. Hayes, Jr. (R-81st).

Hayes entreated the group of ag business leaders to communicate with their legislators through several routes: personal contact, telephone, letter writing, and group meetings. He stressed the need for any contact to be made only after time has been taken to gather all the information on an issue — including what the opposition is saying and doing.

House Majority Leader Samuel Hayes, Jr. was the featured speaker at this week's PennAg Industries Assn. legislative workshop. With Hayes is PennAg's president, Tom Zeigler. Zeigler.

Also on the agenda was Pa. Farmers' Association lobbyist Al Myers. He suggested to the members of PennAg that the duties of a lobbyist are two-fold: the tracking of legislation being one realm, and getting the information back to the organization being the other.

Myers stressed the importance of followup on any legislative contact — checking back on how the legislation is moving, whether it is amended, etc. He also emphasized the need for organizations to work together in getting legislation passed where policies coincide — even nonfarm organizations can work with farm groups to get "viewpoints across and legislation passed," he said.

Dick Broom of FMC spoke on the public's image of pesticides and their use in agriculture and industry. He stated the general public is not convinced that pesticides are necessary. He added that most feel the chemicals are used carelessly, that they cause cancer and birth defects, and that the Environmental Protection Agency is not doing a good job in controlling the use and sales of chemicals.

"People are being carefully taught to be scared of a lot of things," said Broom. "But they don't take everything at face value and so are asking questions. That gives agriculture chemical groups a chance to tell our side of the story."

Broom predicted that 1983 will see an intensification of legislation on pesticides — "and 50 percent of that will be unfavorable." He warned that consumer activists who had heretofore concentrated their efforts at the federal level will be moving into the state arena where they can push for more restrictive pesticide regulations. Even though these groups are relatively unorganized at the state level, Broom cautioned against complacency.

"The world perceives chemical companies as out to make a profit without regard to health and safety," he observed. He suggested taking a low profile by working through other organizations on legislative efforts.

Broom cited incidents where public concern prompted legislation banning pesticides in several states. "I don't feel legislative action is the appropriate route for banning pesticide use," he stated, adding there are agencies to regulate chemicals.

"We need to be as tough and outspoken as our competition," concluded Broom. "Everybody has the right to disagree — that's the way a democracy works.

"Get involved in the political process," he encouraged. "What excuse do you have for sitting on the sidelines?"

Yost reported on a six-year study from Wisconsin which identified 42 herds as Johne's-infected. The breakdown by breeds were: 19 Holstein herds; 16 Guernsey herds; one Jersey herd; 14 mixed herds; and two Angus herds.

During the Louisville seminar, said Yost, a Wisconsin veterinarian voiced his approval of a vaccination program.

The six year study indicated that only 11 cows out of 2,948 animals vaccinated were positive for Johne's.

Current Johne's diagnosis hinges on a 80 to 90-day culture period. To reduce the time lag, said Yost, researchers are working on a test similar to the tuberculosis reactor test which can be read in a few days. Yost admitted the new test is not without its drawbacks.

"Certain types of mastitis and bacterial infection will show up," Yost reported.

Yost's remarks capped an evening of recognition and reflection for the Red Rose breeders. The annual banquet was dedicated to the memory of Jesse G. Balmer, a well-known Guernsey breeder who died this fall.

Quarryville breeders Scott and Elsie Wolff were recognized for their blue-ribbon winners during the National Guernsey Show in Harrisburg.

Production accolades went to Francis and Ethel Kirk of Peach Bottom for high herd for milk. The Kirk's 113 Guernseys pumped an average of 15,321 pounds of milk through the lines. Before the night ended the Peach Bottom couple became a fixture in the receiving line as they accepted the following honors: high 3-year-old for milk at 22,607 pounds; high 3-year-old for fat at 965 pounds on more than 19,000 pounds of milk; high 4-year-old for fat at 952 pounds on 17,814 pounds of milk; high aged cow for milk at 22,267 pounds; and high aged cow for fat at 1,033 pounds on 19,784 pounds of milk.

The K.D. Linde family of Oxford accepted, for the tenth consecutive year, the high herd for fat. The Lindes 44 cows averaged 708 pounds of fat and 15,170 pounds of milk. The Lindes also claimed the top 2-year-old for milk and fat with a record of 15,676 pounds of milk and 756 pounds of fat.

Lancaster Guernsey Breeders president Fred Crider, Nottingham received honors for high 4-year-old in milk with a record of 20,906 pound and 903 of fat.

The Ken Garbers of Willow Street collected the high lifetime production award. Their 16-year-old Guernsey has produced 182,931 pounds of milk and 8,422 pounds of fat.

Field representative Ruth Benedict John reminded the group that the national office in Peterborough, N.H. will be moving to Columbus, Ohio, next month. All correspondence, after Dec. 10, must be mailed to the Columbus headquarters.

Berks hosts manure management tour

By Laurel Schaeffer

LEESPORT — Berks Countians had the opportunity to study several different types of manure management systems last Tuesday.

The tour, sponsored by the county Cooperative Extension Service and Soil Conservation Service, allowed farmers the opportunity to visit five operations, each with a different manure management system.

Emphasized during this years tour was equipment used in manure handling from storage facilities to soil incorporation. Dan Meyer, Penn State Extension engineer and Barry Kintzer, SCS area engineer discussed engineering considerations, fertilizers values and many other aspects of manure management.

Farmers were told that manure incorporation into the soil "as soon as possible" was best, resulting in small losses of nitrogen. Once applied to the surface to the surface, manure can be worked into the ground by plowing, chiseling, or disking. It was noted that several farmers prefer plowing first, applying the manure then disking it in.

Farm Bureau v.p. says surpluses result of farmers producing for gov't

By SHEILA MILLER

HERSHEY — Michigan dairy farmer Elton Smith, vice president of the American Bureau Frederation expressed his and the farm organization's concerns about the current economic situation facing the nation's grain and dairy farmers here on Monday during the Pennsylvania Farmers' Annual Meeting. In both cases, he suggested the cause of the current oversupply of both milk and feed grains in this country are the result of farmers producing for government programs rather than for the market.

Being a partner himself in the prominent Guernsey operation in Michigan near Caledonia, Smith is especially concerned with the controversial 50-cent assessment planned on all dairy sales beginning Dec. 1. His farm, which boasts 800 acres, is home for 475 head of Guernsey cattle and red and white Holsteins under the prefix Med-O-Bloom.

Smith, who has served as president of the Michigan Farm Bureau since 1964 and who was honored as Michigan's Dairyman of the Year, admitted he hasn't found anybody across the country who completely likes the federal dairy program and its assessments. He suggested that what allowed this type of program to get a foothold in Washington was the fact that farmers and farm organizations could not get together on a plan to solve the dairy surplus nightmare. "Unless these same organizations get together on a plan, I think we'll see more of this same kind of action from Congress in the future," Smith predicted, citing the current administration's budget restriction policies.

Smith termed the current dairy checkoff plan an "administrative nightmare." He stated that the present plan calls for an additional 50-cent assessment to be levied next April on all dairy farmers who show no efforts in lowering milk production. For that type of program, Smith said, a special federal bureau will have to be created to collect this additional half dollar a hundredweight from some farmers and not from others.

Smith predicted that new legislation will be enacted after Jan. 1 to revamp the federal dairy program. He encouraged farmers and organizations to develop ideas and plans to submit to their legislative leaders so that the resulting legislation will reflect their needs.

"I believe in the original price support legislation of 1937 which was established in order to give the consumers an adequate supply of milk and other dairy products," Smith said. He noted that the program got out of hand when it was amended to 75 percent, 90 percent, and then 80 percent of parity, finally to be indexed every six months.

"That's where we got into trouble," Smith observed. "There was no relation between the price dairy farmers received for their product and the market and supply. They were producing for the government rather than for the market. It will be better when dairy farmers get back to producing for the market again."

"One problem that all Farm Bureaus must address this year is how to improve the net income of farmers," Smith noted. He added that the farm organizations across the country will be fighting depressed farm prices and bumper crops. On the plus side, he said, is the fact that inflation has decreased.

Citing statistics, Smith stated milk production will set another record high this year at 134.5 billion pounds with record CCC purchases of 13.6 billion pounds of milk equivalent for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30. He noted purchases for the first week of the current marketing year were up 38 percent from the same week a year ago.

Smith suggested several alternatives for the dairy situation; no dairy program; reduction of price support; support prices tied to purchases; quotas; exporting surpluses; producers paying for cost of purchases; or a cap on purchases. He admitted few of these alternatives have much appeal with dairy producers.

Smith also mentioned proposed milk standard changes which are currently being considered by the dairy advisory committee of AFBF in which support would be given for higher solids-not-fat standards for fluid milk.

A short-run cure for the dairy problem, said Smith, could be found in special sales and give away programs. A similiar surplus situation is occurring in the grain fields of the nation, added Smith, which may not have an easy answer either.

Smith paralelled what happened to the dairy industry to the current dilemma confronting the nation's grain farmers. "We have more grain in reserve stocks now than at any time in the history of our nation," Smith said. "With the farmers watching government target and supply prices, they began producing for the government."

Michigan dairy farmer and Farm Bureau vice president Elton Smith looked at surpluses in grain and dairy industries Monday during PFA's 32nd annual meeting in Hershey.

The only solution to the grain surplus problem, in the shortrun, said Smith, is an acreage set aside; in the long term, it's to cut down on target prices"

Smith suggested several plans that AFBF is advocating as solutions to farmers' economic turmoil; the first is called "freeze and fix."

"By this we mean a program to immediately 'freeze' all federal cost-of-living allowances for at least three years, and 'fix' or change present laws that now require growth in entitlement program outlays," Smith explained.

Ranck's road to survival has many avenues

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

STRASBURG — The pending 50 cent per hundreweight deduction has been riding herd on a weary dairy industry for almost three months.

Nationwide, comments and petitions to stop the course of this marauder have flooded the USDA at a rate of 2,500 per day. But the comment period has ended and attentions will be riveted on Washington, D.C. in hopes the massive plea did not go unheeded.

At a meeting, last month, of Pennsylvania dairy leaders, several individuals went on record denouncing the program, calling for quotas, increased promotion, etc.

It seemed clear that almost everyone opposed the deduction.

Almost everyone.

Then a young Lancaster County farmer took the floor and offered a view from the other side of the coin.

"I would go on record as one who is not opposed to the current suggestion," stated Don Ranck.

"If the message has been to us producers in the past five years — 'produce more' — that's what the price has dictated. Then, to say the price dropping will dictate the opposite effect, I think, would be accurate. We will see production decline.

Back home on his Strasburg dairy farm, Verdant Acres, Ranck expands on his philosophy.

"I feel very strongly to go to a quota system or a production control of any kind is going to subsidize the inefficient operator. It's going to pay a high price of milk to everyone across the board up to a certain production level," he says.

Instead, Ranck offers the opposite solution — pay a farmer to NOT produce milk.

"Now that sounds at the outset to be ludicrous. It sounds almost un-American," he admits.

Presently, the Commodity Credit Corporation spends more than $14 per hundredweight to acquire and store surplus dairy products, Ranck says.

"It would pay the taxpayers if there were less milk on the market and payment was made to the farmer, let's say $10 per hundredweight, for every hundredweight less than perhaps the same base being set up for the 50 cent deduction."

For example, under Ranck's proposed set-aside program, a farmer producing 1,000 pounds per day and cut back to 900 pounds would receive full market value for the 900 pounds, plus $10 for those 100 pounds not produced.

Under this system, Ranck explains that effeciency will still be encouraged.

"A farmer would say 'if I can do something for less cost and still ship the same amount of milk,' he's going to still have that opportunity cost."

However, Ranck notes there needs to be some logical way of limiting the amount to be paid in a set-aside, much like in corn and wheat programs.

"There needs to be a limit either in time and or quantity," he adds.

One of Ranck's suggestions for limits included a sliding scale set-aside, resulting in lower payments over time.

"It would be sort of a tapering off way of helping a farmer move out of seeking higher and higher production if he doesn't want to and move into something else he'd rather do.

"I think it's a positive way of encouraging a farmer to take other alternatives, rather than making a farmer who decides to take alternative look like he's a poor manager," he continues.

"There's still an enormous opportunity in the dairy industry to make a decent living and the sharp managers are going to take advantage of it and also sharp managers are going to take advantage of other diversifications."

Diversification was in the back of Ranck's mind 18 months ago when he installed a concrete slatted floor over a manure pit.

"The slatted floor system frees us from using bedding," he explains. But it adds more to the Ranck operation than just a management luxury. The floor adds another dimension — diversification.

"It is actually hog finishing slats. There's no reason that I couldn't put 300 hogs in there if I decided to go that direction.

"I could feed beef and hogs here far more efficiently than with a system that required bedding," he explains.

Ranck's manure system currently operates on a gravity flow basis. But because of the density of hog manure, he admits he would need mechanization to move the manure to the pit.

The pit is designed to store the annual manure production of 70 cows and 70 head of young stock. However, Ranck empties the pit between three and five times per year, depending on his cropping system.

"This year I'm putting contour terraces out in the back field so I have some more manure to haul yet. I rent the pump and rent the tank and put it on when I need it," he notes.

For the first few weeks after the slatted floor was put in, Don recalls he walked through the pit every day to find out "what was happening."

What he found was a well-ventilated system, but he didn't know quite how well ventilated until he had an appraisal from a few feathered friends.

The slats within in the barn are hog finishing slats, while the slats in the surrounding feedlot are cattle slats, a little wider, explains Ranck.

One of the farm ducks was leading her train of 13 babies through the barn without any difficulty until they reached the feedlot. One by one, each duckling fell through the larger slats and disappeared to their seemingly hopeless fate.

The Rancks could hear babies peeping for about three days and then silence. More than a month later, while draining the pit, out popped 13 growing, healthy young ducks.

They had survived on the corn and had developed a healthy appetite for maggots and flies. Don recalls watching the young ducks milling around some loose corn after they left the pit and rather than eat the corn, the small beaks were snapping deftly at flies.

Today, there are no pit-dwelling ducks, rather they prefer to inhabit the Rancks' pond located in the field in front of the house.

Don reclaimed the one-time marshy area by taking advantage of nearby road construction. The road crews delivered truckload after truckload of soil. Today, the high-tensile strength electric fence divides the reclaimed area into seven lots, room Don planned for if the Rancks' decide to expand the herd.

While waiting for the current industry uncertainty to clear, Don and wife Ginny are working on another project, another dimension, another option.

By now it's no secret the computer industry has mobilized a large sector of the country. Ten years ago, one in several thousand worked in computer-related jobs. Today, the ratio is one in ten.

Through the use of their computer, the Rancks hope to offer dairy farmers a service which will simplify the chore of choosing A.I. sires.

"I want to select sires by computer by any one of 30 criteria, Ranck reports.

"It's very difficult to select the sires that are within a certain price range. You first of all would have to contact every stud and find out what the prices are on all the bulls that are on the top sires list.

"Next look at all the criteria in four or five different publications and then also go back to the stud to get their catalog," he explains.

"I see it as not only a service to farmers but to breeding studs who haven't set up the software to do this. For a small fee they could get the same listing of only their own bulls on any criteria," he adds.

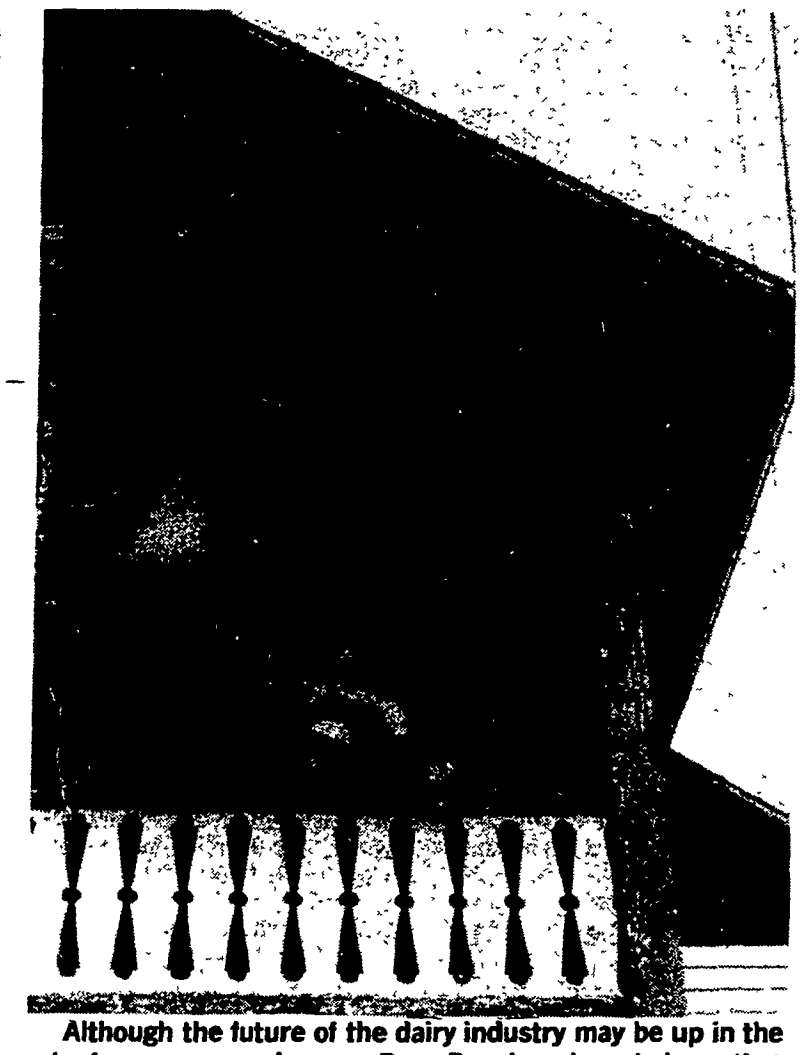
The computer service is still in its embryonic stages, but it has grown from an idea into something concrete.

Success may be nothing more than ideas acted upon and the only true failure may be that of not trying.

While the dairy industry watches and waits for the word from Washington, the Rancks move forward.

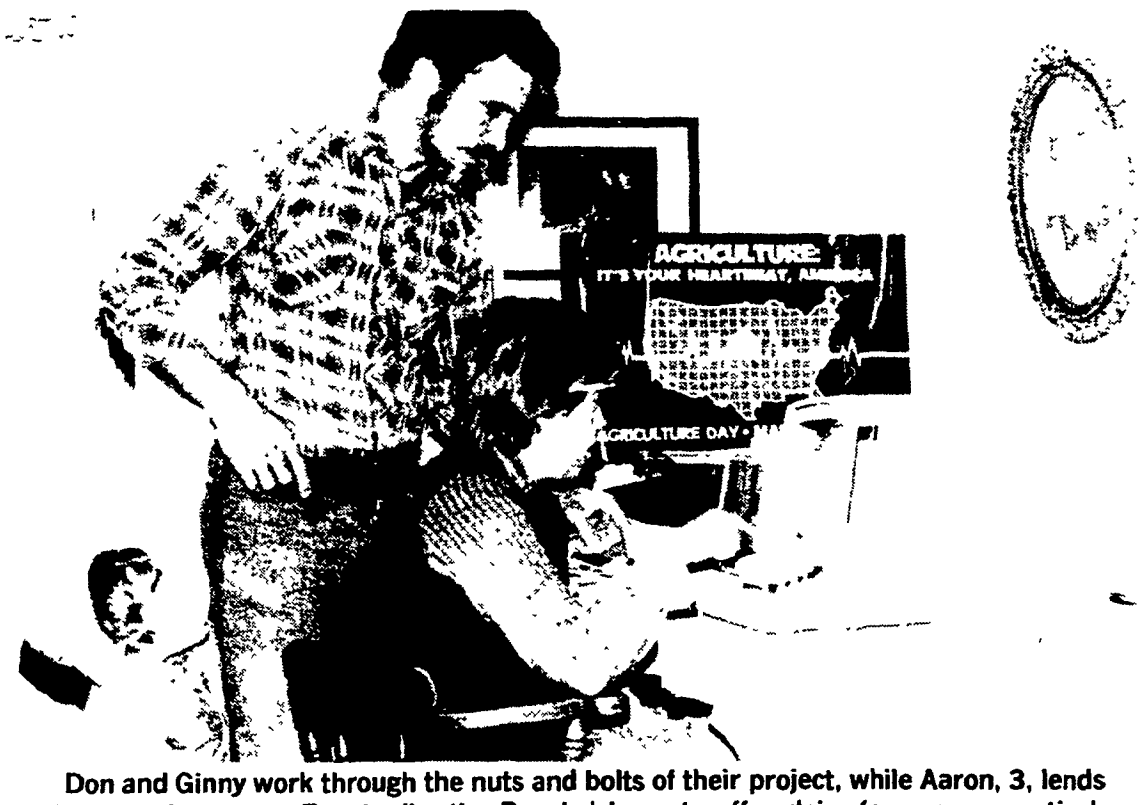
Whether Ranck channels his diversity from dairy, to beef to hogs to computer services, he'll find it all on the road called survival.

Who knows, there just may be a market some day for fly-eating ducks.



Although the future of the dairy industry may be up in the air for some producers, Don Ranck acknowledges that diversity, flexibility and opportunity are passwords for survival. Chiming the good news for the future are: Ginny, with Elisa, 1, and Don with Aaron, 3. Missing from the photo are two older children Eldon, 9 and Heather, 7.

The slatted floor, explains Don, has allowed him the luxury of managing a 60-cow milking herd without a great deal of bedding. If needed, adds the Strasburg dairyman, the slatting easily can accomodate a finishing hog or steer enterprise.



Don and Ginny work through the nuts and bolts of their project, while Aaron, 3, lends his vote of support. Eventually, the Rancks' hope to offer dairy farmers a practical, expedient service for choosing A.I. sires, via their home computer.

UEP director reports on egg exports, foreign investment

MANCHESTER, NH — More than 50 egg and broiler producers attended the fall annual meeting of the New Hampshire Poultry Growers Association last week here at the Chateau Restaurant. The producers heard reports from the University of New Hampshire on egg production tests, control and/or elimination of MG, and the current promotional efforts by the Brown Egg Council.

The afternoon's keynote speaker was Ken Klippen, director of member services for United Egg Producers, Atlanta, Georgia. He reviewed the ongoing efforts and programs of UEP, rooted in trying to secure the best monetary returns for its members consistent with supply and demand. He focused on two topics: efforts to curb foreign investments in the U.S. egg industry, and government support of egg exports.

Klippen reported that earlier in the year exports were depressed, the market was spiraling down, and UEP was advocating molting programs and early-kill to lessen supplies.

"Yet, reports were coming in that new facilities were being built," he said. Recanting the economists' rule of thumb, every percentage change in supply reflects a five percent change in price in the opposite direction, Klippen rhetorically asked "who were these producers building houses?" Inquiries revealed that foreign investors had built new facilities or had plans to build, and as a percentage of the nation's layer population accounted for 5-8 percent of the total.

"At the UEP Denver meeting of the board of directors," Klippen said, "a resolution passed with the intent to limit entry into the egg business by foreign investors, and that such entry would be greeted by a hostile environment." Klippen used an analogy demonstrating UEP's concern with the influx of foreign investors, displacing farm families due to the rigid supply and demand relationship in the egg industry. He added that two-thirds of the egg-laying poultry parent seed stock is foreign owned.

Model legislation has been adopted by UEP for use by the state poultry groups in combating this influx. Klippen noted that federal legislation in curbing foreign investors was unlikely.

In covering the topic of government support of egg exports, Klippen renamed the subject "a tale of frustrations in dealing with the bureaucracy." He traced the development of mideastern markets being taken by the European Economic Community and Brazil through their subsidy programs.

He emphasized that exports accounted for two percent of last year's production amounting to $70 million, "a market we hated to lose," he said. "Furthermore, we discovered that chick placements in November and December were up 50 percent in the Netherlands and 20 percent in France clearly indicating their intentions to capture more of our markets in July and August, the peak periods of U.S. egg exports."

Klippen recalled several UEP meetings and much correspondence with USDA's Under Secretary of Agriculture Seeley Lodwick and Secretary John Block relative to the ineffectiveness of the GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade). UEP proposed a program whereby the Administration could implement their "get tough" policy with the EEC. Entitled "Investment for Free Trade", the proposal, explained Klippen, was a short-term subsidy to aid the U.S. to compete with the EEC. He added that the proposal would help balance the trade deficit, generate tax revenues and increase employment to meet the demands of new markets.

Finally, Senator Jesse Helms added his export amendment to the Agriculture Act of 1982 that provided the authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to spend $175-190 million annually for three years for export assistance, noted Klippen. Following passage in both houses of Congress under the title of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1982, the President signed the bill into law in August as PL 97-253.

"Both UEP and United Egg Association appealed to its membership," said Klippen, "soliciting support in providing direction to the secretary to spend a portion of the authorized funds on an egg export subsidy."

In mid-September, egg exports received a boost, he added, when the Mexican tender for 500,000 cases was issued. At this time, the Commodity Credit Corporation issued a statement providing loan guarantees to the Mexican government and specifying that $19.8 million was tagged for eggs.

Late October, "just before the elections," said Klippen, the Administration announced plans to provide export assistance in its new 3-year, $1.5 billion "blended credit" program blending government export credits with government private credits to lower the interest rate to importing countries. In 1983, $500 million had been tagged, utilizing $100 million fromthe $175 million fund.

"Still," said Klippen, "there remains $75 million to be utilized. We will go back to our membership and solicit their support in securing these funds for the egg industry."

Wrapping up his presentation, Klippen was optimistic about the immediate future. He noted that egg-type breeders in September were down 42 percent from August, and 8 percent from this period last year. Klippen concluded with an indication that the nation layer flock most likely would be 1-3 percent smaller in the first few months of 1983.

The first female through the ring set the pace for the sale with reigning national reserve grand champion female CHG Miss Kay 5M bringing $50,000 for one-half interest. Consignors Split Butte Ranch, Rupert, Idaho, and Charles H. Gray and Son, Murray, Ky., won the reserve grand championship the previous day in the National Polled Hereford Show. Pharris Hereford Farms, Hillsboro, Texas, is the new co-owner of 2-year-old Miss Kay, who is a daughter of BHF Banner King 16J.

The highlight of the bull sale came with a $30,750 bid on one-half interest in BT JR Quester 604M, a 2-year-old son of Gold Standard Sire Enforcer 107H. Quester was a joint entry by Beartooth Ranch, Columbus, Mont., and John E. Rice and Sons, Sheridan, Wyo., and was purchased by 4 Bar S Ranch, Shreveport, La.

Ponderosa Ranch Ltd., Lloydminster, Sask., collected the next-high price of $60,000 on PRL 536 Chantel 472P. A January 1982 daughter of Gold Trophy Sire BT PRL Driver 536L, she stood second in her class at the National Show for Ponderosa. Her new owner is Blueberry Hill Farm, Norfolk, Neb.

G&R Polled Herefords, Marysville, Kan., led G&R Mainframe to the reserve senior bull calf championship in the National Show, and then brought him to the sale where he pulled in a price of $15,000 for one-half interest. Colon Terrell, Denton, N.C., bought Mainframe who is a September 1981 son of Superior Sire BT CL Domino 15G, and was named the champion sale bull.

Moving down the bull roster, a trio of breeders, Keith and Linda Rooker, Uniontown, Pa.; Busby Farms, Alexandria, Pa.; and Boyd Polled Herefords, Mays Lick, Ky., sold one-half interest in BF Juryman for $11,000. The successful bidder on this 2-year-old son of Graystone Hurrah was Carter Hereford Farm, Neosho, Mo.

Closely behind at $10,000 each for half interest were JR 34H Hillpark M296, consigned by Wingert Stock Farm, Ottawa, Kan., and John E. Rice and Sons, Sheridan, Wyo.; and Boyd Bengal 261P, offered by Boyd. Hillpark is a May 1980 bull sired by ABSR Victor Spi 34, who was bought by John C. Oswald, Hutchinson, Kan. BT CL Domino 445M sired Bengal, a March 1982 bull calf that went to Holly Hill Farm, Knoxville, Tenn.

Rattle & Snap Farms, Columbia, Tenn., led R&S Justa Victor 10P, by Gold Standard Sire Will-Via Justa V, into the ring and left with $10,000 paid on three-fourths interest in the bull. He is a 1982 calf that was bought by Pharris Hereford Farms, Hillsboro, Texas.

On the female roster, Mark Penn, Canton, Miss., pulled in a $10,100 price on RWP Enforcette T97, by Enforcer 107H. She went to Rockyknoll Cattle Co., Whiting, Vt. ASB 67K Lassie 2221, a daughter of Stlbrk Gilead 67K, "The Stick," hit a $9,000 price for Greg Billing, Little Falls, N.Y. Also named to the sale champion, she sold to All Phase Farm Management, Boonton, N.J.

E.B. Gee Ranch, East Prairie, Mo., led a cow-calf pair into the ring and collected $7,500 from top bidder Kittiwake Farm, Jasper, Ala. The 3-year-old cow was HM Victoria F243 916, by Gold Trophy Sire OR Dom 549 F243, and her spring heifer calf was EBG Victra 109L 125P, by EBG Victor 14G 109L.

SSS Classy Lady P1, a daughter of 59th National reserve champion bull WP Enforcer Lad 100L, hit a $7,500 price for her consignor, Jarrod Sells, Moultrie, Ga. This yearling went to JF Ranch, Greeneville, Tenn. Farrington Polled Herefords of Abilene, Texas, placed a bid of $6,900 on Sag'nay Serena 7K 110P, sold by HRS Polled Herefords and Rawlys Ranch, Prince Albert, Sask. A January 1982 heifer, she was sired by Gold Seal Sire Wild Cat Sundance 7K.

It's paying yourself to buy in bulk.

New Vigormix™ Bulk Pre-mix Feeding Program cuts waste and costs from breeding to market.

Now, Vigortone pre-mixes are available for bulk delivery. You'll save money on your pre-mix purchase by buying in volume — and you'll save yourself a lot of work when grinding and mixing. With the new Vigormix Program, you simply meter in one all-purpose pre-mix from your bulk bin.

During creep feeding and starting, you add a pack of Vigorpig 120 — and during gestation a pack of Vigorsow 115, to supply the additional nutrients that are critical at these times. You give yourself a little extra profit — without giving up the precision that you've always had by feeding with Vigortone.

Diversity is the password in 'Brenneman Country'

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

LANCASTER — The thick, leatherbound book would rival a volume of information in any desk dictionary.

And as Clair Brenneman leafs through it, the pages take him back more than three centuries when his ancestor Melchior Brenneman fled from Switzerland to Germany because of religious persecution.

The thick book, the Brenneman genealogy, traces the trail of Melchior the Exile to his son Melchior the Pioneer who landed in Lancaster County in 1717.

The pioneering Brenneman staked his claim among 1,000 acres of what is now the New Danville-Conestoga region and began farming the land which, 265 years later, became the oldest Century Farm to be honored this week.

The original 1,000-acre tract, which was obtained from founding father William Penn, has dwindled to 200.

"We're just thankful we have that with the way things are today," explains Clair Brenneman, who along with brother Paul farm the operating dairy and produce farm.

Two of Melchior Brenneman's 66 descendants, Clair and Paul are by trade dairy farmers but their orchards and produce have made them a fixture at Lancaster's Central Market, Root's Auction as well as at-home sales.

"Brennemans have always been in fruit," Clair says. "Some of my earliest childhood memories are playing in the orchard while my parents were up in the trees picking apples." A chalkboard hanging from a large shade tree outside the Brennemans' Route 324 farm, informs travelers of daily delights. The most recent message was "Cider Today."

This year the Brenneman orchards produced a bumper crop. Bushel baskets full of apples line the walls along the old stone barn, built by Martin Brenneman in 1806.

The apple trees, because of this year's overproduction, will most likely be barren next year, predicts Clair. After years of produce and fruit experience, Clair has seen fruit trees expend so much energy and nutrients into producing a large crop, that they will become virtually depleted for next year.

However, Clair, an avowed optimist, isn't worried.

"We're diversified," he adds.

His wife Jane, who hails from a marketing background, grows, picks and markets such delectables as turnips, spinach, sugar peas, tomatos, limas, strawberries and pumpkins.

"I never knew how much marketing was in me until I met him," Jane offers.

The Brennemans' flock of Rhode Island Reds, which can be seen scurrying around the barnyards, roost and lay their highly-marketable brown eggs, in a small white building centered in a nearby pasture.

The chicken house rests on the original 1717 foundation of Melchior Brenneman's log house.

Next in chronological order, the Brennemans' stone barn was erected in 1806 by Martin Brenneman, as evident by the etchings on a stone at the back of the barn.

The barn was extended to accommadate Clair and Paul's growing dairy herd. Their father John S. always kept a few cows

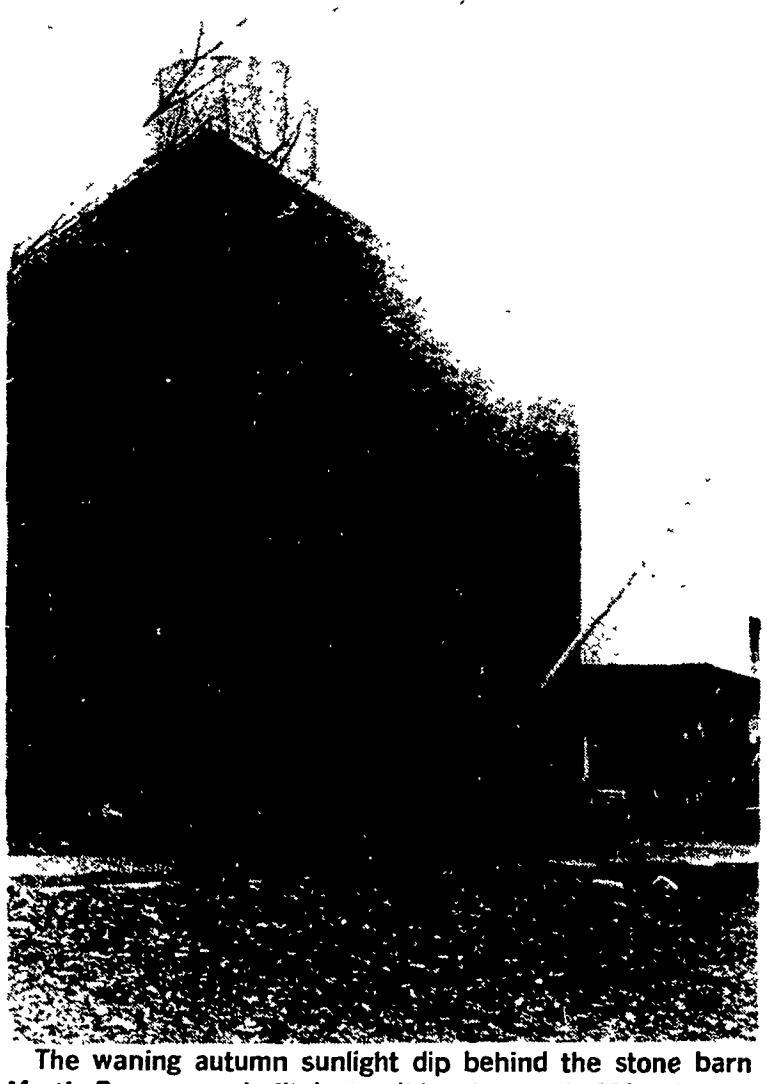
Clair, left, and Paul Brenneman trace their heritage back to 1717, when forefather Melchior Brenneman arrived in the U.S. for religious freedom. The brothers' dairy and produce farm celebrates 265 years, this week, the oldest Century Farm honored. Clair and Paul pause for a moment outside one of the farm's "newer" structures - their homestead, built in 1900.



The waning autumn sunlight dip behind the stone barn Martin Brenneman built, just as it has for nearly 200 autumns before.

The carved stone, as Clair points out, clearly indicates the barn's birthdate - 1806 — as well as its creator, Martin Brenneman.

While the major thrusts of past Brenneman operations focused on fruit and produce, Paul and Clair have found it more profitable to stay with these black and white bovines. The current herd includes about 60 grade milking animals.

One spunky lady recalls another spunky lady

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

NEW PROVIDENCE — The moment I saw her I liked her.

She opened the door of the farmhouse at my knock, stood on the wide sill between the storm and inner door and looked up the foot or more that separated our gazes.

She had that sparkle in her eye – a sparkle that wasn't dimmed by 79 years of watching and living the tremendous changes that have come to agriculture in that time.

I said to myself: " Hey, this is one spunky lady."

And as I talked to her – the spunkiness in her voice was as if each statement she gave was automatically finished with an exclamation point.

She's Frances K. Shenk, of R2 Providence, and along with her brother, J. Fred, she's half of an ag duo who were among those honored this week for their Century Farms.

And their farm on a hillside that overlooks Rt. 322 south of New Providence is a Century Farm more than two and one-half times over. It dates back some 262 years.

Frances' spunkiness shows up best when she talks of her grandmother, another Frances, after whom she was named.

"Grandfather John M. Shenk was very kind and even-tempered," she explains.

"But grandmother Frances was something else. Whenever she scrubbed the doorstep, you always stepped over it or else."

The New Providence area was a popular stop on the Underground Railroad as slaves slipped up from the South through Maryland and continued toward Columbia on their way to Canada.

"I'm sure that Grandmother Frances helped the slaves," her namesake said.

"If anyone around here would have helped them, it would have been her. Believe me."

With her brother Fred, Frances proudly displays the wedding photo of her grandmother. I can see that same spunky sparkle.

Their 140-acre farm is part of 1200 acres that was acquired by Michael Shenk of Switzerland in 1720. The brother and sister are the seventh generation on the farm. It doesn't take an Einstein to figure out that many of those generations lived to ripe old ages in order to accumulate 262 years on the land.

As two of five children of John F. Shenk, they assumed the operation in 1940. Two brothers and a sister have since died.

The Shenks gave up dairying some dozen years ago and the other farming a bit later. The land is now rented to Lester Gerhart of New Providence.

They grew things like tobacco and tomatoes, along with the regular field crops. And these take a lot of work.

The spacious stone farmhouse that sets up on a knoll was started in 1812.

"The workmen started the house but then some of them had to go off and help fight the war," Frances explained.

"After they came back, it was finished in 1813-14."

The brother and sister recall the days of farming with horses and mules before they got their first International tractor in 1939.

Now, working the land is limited to a sizable garden.

But as they tend just a few tomato plants, I'm sure their thoughts drift back to the days – not that long ago – when they grew 12 acres of both green and red.

As she gazes out the living room window, Frances' sparkling eyes fall on the neighboring Amish farm down below.

"We have such good neighbors," she said.

"You know they had a wedding there the other week. There were 320 people there."

Frances and J. Fred Shenk in front of their stone farmhouse.

If anyone would have helped the slaves,

it would have been Grandmother Frances around, but Clair's winning of a Guernsey calf when he was in high school marked the beginning of the commercial dairy.

For years, Clair and Paul milked a Guernsey herd and secured a milk market which operated under the Golden Guernsey trademark. However, the market went out of business and the Brennemans lost their trademark premiums.

"It wasn't a life or death struggle," Clair remembers. He credits the farm's survival on its "jack of all trades" diversity.

"We would have done a lot of sweating," Jane adds, "but Clair and I managed to save a bit before we were married."

Eventually, the Guernseys were phased out of the herd and replaced with Holsteins. Today, only a few of the fawn-colored Guernseys remain in the 60-cow milking herd.

"The milk business has been good," Clair states. "I think we could weather this 50 cent deduction without it being too disastrous."

The brothers grow all of the herd's forage needs, which includes 75 acres of field corn for silage, hay and haylage. Only the soybean supplement and mineral mix are purchased, Clair explains.

The early 1900-house on the Brenneman homestead includes Clair, Jane and their two sons Ray and Jay. Brother Paul lives on nearby Brenneman Road with wife Elizabeth and children Joy, Rose, Merle and Nevin.

"This is Brenneman Country," Clair explains. His 92-year-old Uncle Harry, who also lives nearby is still active at the cider press and manufactures the gallons of cider marketed at home.

With the exception of a few hired people during sweet corn season, the entire marketing and farming operations are run by the family.

"It's traditional to put the whole family in the harness," laughs Clair.

And in this case, the harness is a 265-year-old legacy.

AND OTHER OPINIONS

Donald Moul, head of Dog Law Enforcement, was asked at a meeting in September, "How bad is it down there in Lancaster County?" He replied, "Not as bad as it was made out to be. One or two places need some upgrading out of 30 or 32." Those aren't bad percentages at all.

The following state-wide groups are also opposing House Bill 2535: Pa. Federation of Sportsman Clubs, Pa. State Foxhunters Assn., Mason-Dixon Foxhunters Assn., Pa. Nite Hunters, Pa. Federation of Beagle Clubs, Pa. Houndsman Assn, and the Pa. Dog Owners Protective Assn.

If this bill passes, we feel the legitimate license buying Pennsylvania resident once again has had his pocket picked by a group of people who should be representing the majority but, for reasons of their own, sometimes don't.

Brain power

I am writing in reference to the editorial on the Pritikin diet ("Health food hitlist makes headlines," Off the Sounding Board, Nov. 6, 1982 issue of Lancaster Farming). I was born in New Zealand where butter, eggs, cream — REAL cream, plenty of beef, lamb and pork are in the daily and weekly diet. Life expectancy is long and infant morality low.

Ireland, where they all eat, drink and enjoy cream, butter, whiskey, meats of all kinds, eggs galore, has very low heart statistics; and the Irish live a long time, given a chance.

Anyone who wants to make money fast has only to think up a diet. Everyone thinks that diet will cure all. It helps, but isn't the only answer. It's easier to cut out eggs than do a daily exercise routine.

One reason why the underdeveloped countries are underdeveloped is due to the lack of many nutrients in the diet which feed the creative processes in the brain. Aren't nutritionists blaming poor eating habits (in some people) for lack of mental ability?

Eat more eggs, butter, cheeses, meat and milk for brain development.

Application period for storage facility loans ends

GALESBURG, Ill. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block announced that with the 1982 grain harvest in its final stages and most loan money targeted, applications will no longer be considered for the farm storage facility loan program, effective Nov. 12.

"Our changes in the program and the additional funding have been successful in meeting our goal of assuring adequate storage for these record crops," Block said. "Farmers have taken advantage of the program and have applied for most of the funds made available for loans."

On Aug. 20, Block authorized changes in the program which included permitting loans for construction of facilities to store up to two years' production of eligible crops. And on Sept. 23, another $60 million in loans were made available to build storage for the 1982 record corn, wheat and soybean crops.

Block also announced emergency measures on Aug. 26 to help alleviate potential shortages of grain storage space. Those measures included easing requirements on types of storage space used by warehouse operators approved under the Uniform Grain Storage Agreement or licensed under the U.S. Warehouse Act.

County offices of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will continue to process applications now on file, Block said.

MILK MARKET NEWS

Federal Order 4
Class I jumps 10 cents

Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine announced a Class I milk price of $15.34 per hundredweight for December 1982. This price is up 10 cents from the November price and is 4 cents higher than last December's Class I price.

Shine announced a Class II milk price of $12.64 per hundredweight for October 1982 and a butterfat differential of 17.0 cents for the month. The Class II milk price is up 10 cents from September while the butterfat differential dropped one-tenth of a cent.

These class prices are based on the October 1982 Minnesote-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $12.56 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for October was $1.4744 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.9369 per pound, f.o.b. plants in the Chicago area.

Base price unchanged

Shine also announced an October 1982 base milk price of $13.87 per hundredweight and an excess milk price of $12.50. The weighted average October price was $13.90 and the butterfat differential for the month was 17.0 cents. The base milk price was unchanged from September but was 14 cents below last October.

The advertising withholding rate, which is deducted from the base and excess milk prices but not the weighted average price, was 14 cents a hundredweight in October 1982 compared with 13 cents last year. A total of $701.8 thousand was withheld for advertising in October. The gross value of producer milk during October was $69.5 million, compared with $67.8 million a year earlier.

Shine said producer milk receipts totaled 501.3 million pounds during October, an increase of 15.4 million pounds or more than three percent from a year earlier. A total of 7,120 producers were shipping to Order 4 pool handlers in October, an increase of 22 from a year ago.

The average daily delivery per producer was 2,271 pounds during the month, an increase of 63 pounds or 2.9 percent from last October. Class I producer milk totaled 240.8 million pounds and was down over ten million pounds from a year ago. The Class I utilization percentage was 48.03 in October, down sharply from 51.64 percent last year.

Base milk accounted for 92.34 percent of total producer milk receipts. The average butterfat test of producer milk during October was 3.67 percent compared with 3.53 percent in September and 3.72 last October.'

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 207.9 million pounds during October, a decline of one percent from a year ago, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

Federal Order 2
$13.81 set for October milk

Dairy farmers who supplied milk plants regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during October will be paid on the basdis of a uniform price of $13.81 per hundredweight. Market Administrator Thomas A. Wilson stated that the price was $13.74 in September 1982 and $13.87 in October 1981.

The seasonal incentive fund returned a total of $3,879,204.16, or $.437 per hundredweight, to the dairy farmers' uniform price for October. This fund was generated by reducing the uniform price during the high-production spring months.

A total of 17,417 dairy farmers supplied the New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area with 887,818,898 pounds of milk during October 1982. This was an increase of 3.0 percent (about 26 million pounds) from last year. The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $125,343,922.81. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not

Farm Bureau v.p.

Bureau is tied to a constitutional amendment to bind Congress with legal spending limits, said Smith.

"The liberals in Congress have been hard at work to block this."

Smith also cited AFBF's efforts in expanding the exporting of agricultural commodities, which he noted have become quite stale during the past two years.

Adequate net income for farmers cannot be generated unless expanding production is tied to expanding markets," noted Smith. "Many farm and agribusiness people have overestimated the world need for food — or confused 'potential' with need with 'present' need — or confused need with ability to buy.

"The only statistic that counts now in terms of improved net farm income has to do with who has the need for food — and the ability to pay for what they need. Because of a number of complex reasons, our two best customers, Japan and the European Economic Community, also represent two of our most difficult trading problems," Smith said, noting the strict quotas on imports in Japan and the highly subsidized commodities in the E.C.

Smith explained AFBF has traveled to Japan to try to establish the channels to secure a less strict import policy. And, in the case of the EC, he said Farm Bureau is advocating the U.S. fight "fire with fire" by subsidizing agricultural products, or subsidizing interest rates to allow foreign countries affordable funds with which they can buy U.S. goods.

"Prosperity for all of us, no matter what we produce, depends upon improved farm income from the marketplace. It begins by finding ways to clear out market-depressing stocks. We need to clear the shelves and start over," concluded Smith. "In every instance, we must avoid government farm programs which short-circuit market signals. We must get a better handle on supply in relation to demand through expanded markets and increased use."

voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers used 390,134,412 pounds of milk for Class I, 43.9 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test and skim milks. For October 1982, handlers paid $14.69 per hundredweight for Class I milk compared with $14.72 a yeart ago.

The balance 56.1 percent, was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream and yogurt. Handlers paid $12.62 for this milk.

For October 1982, a differential of 17.0 cents was applied to the price for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

U.S. butter/cheese climbs

U.S. butter output totaled 262 million pounds during July - September, up 5 percent from a year earlier. At the same time, American-type cheese output totaled 662 million pounds for the period, up 7 percent from a year earlier.

Broiler placements drop

HARRISBURG — Placements of broiler chicks in the Commonwealth during the week ending Nov. 6 were 1,833,000 according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. Placements were 12 percent below the previous week and eight percent below the corresponding week a year earlier. Average placements during the past nine week were three percent below a year ago.

Placements in the 19 states were 67,626,000, eight percent percent below the previous week but seven percent above the same week a year earlier. Average placements during the past nine weeks were one percent above a year ago.

Broiler-fryers slaughtered in Pennsylvania under federal inspection week ending Oct. 27 totaled 1,905,000 with an average liveweight of 4.13 pounds.

Congressman Jeffords

and ag audience on a bit of a tour of how agriculture got into its present depressed state and then outlined an optimistic outlook of how to get back out of it.

As a dairyman and a dairy legislative leader in Washington, Jeffords concentrated on the dairy situation, which he describes as the Number One farm problem for the survival of agriculture in the Northeast.

In a news conference prior to the banquet, Jeffords said:

"I talked to Secretary Block as of 2 p.m. (Thursday) and he said the price support reduction will be implemented as scheduled on December 1," Jeffords said.

"I'm not sure if it will come out of December or January milk checks."

Congressman Jeffords gave a lengthy explanation of what he believes is the top ag problem for the Northeast.

"Out biggest problem here in the Northeast is related to the grain situation," he said.

"With little capital expense many farmers in the West are putting their grain through cows and selling it out the other end to the government.

"We could lose 10 to 40 percent of the farms in New England in the next few years if things don't change.

Jeffords strongly defended the dairy industry.

"We shouldn't have this guilt complex," he said.

"It's the part of the ag industry we should be the most proud of."

He mildly criticized the Administration for its singling out of the dairyman concerning the problems of surpluses.

"We can all play games with figures," he said.

"After all, only 16 percent of the problem of surplus government commodities is dairy.

"And there are 2.4 billion pounds of dairy surplus and 240 billion pounds of surplus grain."

He said that food should only be used as the "utlimate" weapon to prevent the Soviets from pushing the button.

Jeffords said the U.S. has to quit being the good guy in world trade.

"I'm tired of our so-called friends continuing to take advantage of us in world trade," he said.

In regards to the future to get the dairy indusrtry out of the doldrums, along with all of ag, he called for continuing the policy of more loans into operating areas rather than farm purchasing, more promotion by the government and at least half of the 50-cent or possible eventual $1.00 reduction in supports to go for promotion.

"The future of farming is tremendous," he said.

"But, we got to get over these present difficult times.

"And, get the State Department out of ag policy."

Jeffords was introduced by State Ag Secretary Penrose Hallowell.

Also participating in the program were Master of Ceremonies Darvin Boyd; John Barley, who will be stepping down as ag committee chairman to hand the reins over to Extension Director Jay Irwin; and Richard E. Blouse Jr., Chamber president.

The honored farm families included:

–Clair K. and Jane Brenneman, Jr. and Paul K. and Elizabeth L. Brenneman, R6 Lancaster, 265 years.

–J. Fred and Frances K. Shenk, R2 New Providence, 262 years.

–Harry G. and Kathryn Herr, 2125 South View Road, Lancaster, 242 years.

–Donald and Joan Witmer, R1 Washington Boro, 106 years.

–M. Isabel Ferree, R1 Kirkwood, 102 years.

–John F. and Lorraine Cassel, R2 Manheim, 141 years.

State Ag Secretary Penrose Hallowell chats with Joan Witmer, R1 Washington Boro; and M. Isabel Ferree, R1 Kirkwood; two of the Century Farms family members.

Two-day bear season begins Monday

HARRISBURG — Hunters will have two days in which to take a black bear in all or parts of 41 Pennsylvania counties Monday and Tuesday, this Monday and Tuesday.

Originally, a one-day season was planned, but numerous damage complaints during late summer and early autumn led the Game Commission to schedule two days of hunting.

Counties in which bears may be taken are Armstrong, Blair, Bradford, Cambria, Cameron, Carbon, Centre, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Columbia, Elk, Forest, Huntingdon, Indiana, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Lycoming, McKean, Mifflin, Monroe, Montour, Northumberland, Pike, Potter, Schuylkill, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Venango, Warren, Wayne and Wyoming.

Also, those parts of Berks, Dauphin, Lebanon and Lehigh Counties north of Route 22 and that part of Northampton County north of Route 22 (except that portion east of Route 191 and north of Routes 512 and 611) are open to bear hunting.

During the last year's one-day season, hunters took 819 bruins, the third largest harvest on record. Biologists are hopeful more bears will be taken this year.

Game protectors in 34 districts, concentrated in northcentral and northeastern counties, rate bear populations "excellent." Regardless of the population, many variables, such as weather, the economy, hunting pressure, land accessibility, early denning activity, bear concentrations and food availability, can affect the size of the harvest.

Licensed bear hunters are reminded they must wear at least 100 square inches of flourescent orange on the head, or on the chest and back combined. A cap contains 100 square inches, but all bear hunters are urged to wear both a cap and vest (coat) or fluorescent orange. No hunting accidents were recorded during the last three bear seasons, and it is hoped this fine record will continue this year.

Successful hunters are reminded that bear meat is much like pork. It should be thoroughly cooked to avoid trichinosis. Last year, tissue samples from nine bears revealed trichinosis.

Five or more persons hunting bear together or cooperating together in manner, must maintain a roster. Hunting together or cooperating with other means actual participation, such as driving. Simply staying together at a camp does not require a roster.

A hunter may take only one bear per season and hunting parties of two or more persons are restricted to one bear per party. Shooting a bear in a den is unlawful.

Each person who kills a bear must, immediately after removing the entrails, or within an hour of harvest, and before the carcass is moved fill out the temporary tag supplied with the bear license and attach it to the head (ear) of the bear. A 3-inch stick should be placed vertically in the bear's mouth to hold it open and facilitate removal of a tooth at a bear check station.

Within 24 hours, all bear lawfully taken must be officially inspected and tagged by a Game Commission officer at an established bear check station. The metal tag shall remain permanently attached to the head, or until the head has been tanned or mounted.

Hunters may take bears to one of the following Pennsylvania check stations:

NAILE tags Angus female champs

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — "The Angus breed is a paternal breed and today we've had a tremendous show," emphasized judge Mark Richardson of Afton, OK during Monday's Angus Female Show at the North American International Livestock Exposition.

Richardson explained that the breed must keep trying to improve and "going a step beyond." With that, the judge slapped Windac Class 1752 as Grand Champion Angus Female.

Windoc, owned by Windy Acres Angus of Harrison, NE was the Junior Champion Female.

Standing under Windac was HA Miss Bartman owned by Gunson West and Frank and Cy Dieter of Lampasas, TX. HA Miss Bartman was both Reserve Grand Champion Female and Reserve Junior Champion Female.

Hayes Star Tall Rosanna, owned by Hayes Star Ranch of Traveler's Rest, SC was named Champion Junior Heifer Calf. Reserve Jr. Heifer Calf went to Premier Celebrity of Premier Beef Cattle from Fowlerville, MI.

In the Senior Heifer Calf classes, champion went to Lovana Farms and B & L Ranch of Clarkesville, GA. Lovana Farms then turned around and took Reserve Senior Heifer Calf.

Weaver Angus and G. Kent Dye of Peoria, IL receiving the Intermediate Champion honor. Again, Lovana Farms took Reserve, in the Intermediate classes.

Herr wins at NAILE

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The long, tiring trek to Louisville's North American International Livestock Exposition was well worth the trip for Lancaster Countian Barbara Herr who walked away from competition with a reserve champion title in the Dorset ewe class at the show's junior sheep show this past week.

Barb is the 19-year-old daughter of Robert and Betty Herr of Narvon. A graduate of Garden Spot High School, New Holland, she now is a freshman at Penn State majoring in animal production.

Well-known throughout the county for her continual winnings with her Dorset lambs, Barb recently added the title of Reserve Champion Ram and Reserve Champion Ewe at Harrisburg's Keystone Internatonal Livestock Exposition. During the same week, Barb was honored for her outstanding achievement in FFA livestock project work at the Pa. Livestock Association's annual banquet.

USDA restricts Swedish horse imports

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Department of Agriculture officials have imposed restrictions on the importation of horses from Sweden because of contagious equine metritis, a venereal disease of horses.

John K. Atwell, deputy administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said that Swedish officials reported finding the disease in a stallion that had bred about 40 mares within the past year. No clinical signs of the disease have yet been reported in the mares.

Atwell said the restrictions will affect the importation of breeding-age mares and stallions only. To be eligible for entry into the United States, animals over two years of age must undergo specific prophylactic treatments, and must pass three successive negative culturing for the bacteria at seven day intervals.

Mares must also have the clitorial sinuses surgically removed under the direction of government veterinarians. This is required because the clitoral sinuses have been found to be the site where bacteria are most likely to remain after clinical signs of infection have disappeared, Atwell said.

After passing U.S. port-of-entry quarantine, mares and stallions from countries affected with contagious equine metritis must pass extended state quarantine, with testing, and a repeat of the specific precautionary treatment, under the supervision of veterinary officials in USDA-designated states.

Since discovery of the disease in Great Britain in 1977, 11 countries have had restrictions placed on horse exports to the United States because of the disease. They are Australia, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Federal Republic of Germany, France, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

Notice of this action was published in the Nov. 9 Federal Register.

Berks tour

On the Oley Turnpike Dairy farm of Eugene Moser, Oley, liquid manure from two underground staved pits and Slurry store was injected into the soil by a liquid manure tank equipped with injectors.

Other manure handling equipment included a steel reinforced concrete above-ground silo measuring 8 by 80 feet on the farm of Elmer Eyrich, Oley. Here manure from a freestall barn is pushed into a gutter cleaner, dropped into air pressure pump system and relayed into the storage silo. The manure is then dropped into an open-top Martin spreader. This system handles manure for a 100-head herd for six months.

Another type of manure storage system in use was a roof-covered building measuring 40 by 65 by 8 feet, constructed of reinforced concrete walls, floor and ramp. Manure with straw is fed into the building by a Patz air pressure ram pump from a 48-head cow facility and hauled out with a convention spreader and front end loader.

At Red Wing Poultry Farm, Fleetwood, a 43,000 cubic feet earth-sided holding pond with concrete ramp was on display. Here manure is pumped from two poultry houses for 65,000 laying hens by Patz pumps. Also a 200 head slatted underground pit hog finishing facility was on display. Equipment in use included a Hedlund Basin Agitator pump for earth-banked storage and Hedlund 2600 gallon liquid manure tank.

At Vista Grande Farm, Fleetwood, a 24,600 cubic feet earth bank with concrete floor storage facility was on display. Here manure from a open-front, counter-sloped heifer barn is stored in the pit with entrance ramp by a barn cleaner. Manure is hauled with a spreader and front end loader. During the tour however, a Martin Equilizer was demonstrated for loading the manure into the spreader.

Manure equipment in use at Vista Grande farm during last week's Berks County manure management tour included a Martin Equalizer, used to load the manure spreader. Five different manure handling operations were featured during this year's tour.

HAVING SOIL PROBLEMS?
Here's A Timely Tip...

Apply lime on frozen ground

Lime can be applied almost anytime, however winter months are ideal, because the ground is firm and the freezing and thawing action helps to disseminate the lime in the soil.

During farmers petition

setting the second assessment into action.

Based on Farmers' Union's projected post-assessment price of $11.80 per hundredweight, Atty. Furman predicts that a farmer with a herd of 40 cows will lose $10,000 per year. A herd of 60 cows is projected to operate at a deficit of $15,000, and 80 cows at a $20,000 loss.

Dairy farmers pumped an estimated $1 billion into the Pennsylvania economy in 1981 and Farmers' Union calculates that the one dollar assessment to milk prices means an additional $90 million loss to the already depressed Pennsylvania economy.

Breaking that down in a more regional economic impact study, Furman's figures predicted a per-year loss to Adams County of $1.247 million, $3.031 million in Cumberland County, a whopping $13.46 million in dairy-heavy Lancaster County, and $2.145 million in York County.

"We must face the facts of the milk surplus, but this is an insane, cruel proposed solution," argued Furman.

Rather than cut surpluses, Farmers' Union and other dairy and general farm groups have repeatedly warned that the assessments will instead boost production in the short run, as farmers add cows to recoup their losses.

In the longer run, Farmers' Union speculates that many farm bankruptcies and insolvencies will result, further depressing the stagnant national ecomony. Even milk sanitation, they preduct, may suffer, as dairy producers, cut corners in cleaning supplies to pare costs.

Farmers' Union also takes issue with the plan to have the 50-cent assessments paid into the government general funds, rather than specifically directed at milk production cutback solutions.

The government, in fact, is partly to blame for the surplus problem, said Farmers' Union spokespersons at the Friday evening meeting.

Casein imports amounted to 154 million pounds in 1981, and 1982 year-end projections show an increase of 30 percent more casein entering the country. That displaces an estimated 2 billion pounds of domestic whole milk from the market, since much of the casein goes into imitation dairy products.

Cheese imports also are expected to increase by the end of 1982, in the amount of nearly 20 percent. An estimated half of the 600 million pounds of mozarella used annually by the booming U.S. pizza business is an imitation cheese product.

National Farmers Union lobbyist Sacia echoed Atty. Furman's claims that the NFU Washington office has copies of letters turning down potential export sales of U.S. dairy products to various world buyers, in spite of a 1981 law passed to encourage such marketing efforts.

In one large sale of butter to New Zealand, said Sacia, U.S. trade officials agreed to the buyer's insistence that further sales of butter would have to meet their approval. New Zealand reportedly then used that purchased butter for their own domestic consumption, and in turn, sold their own production to the Soviet Union. A trade embargo was in effect at that time on direct U.S. sales to the Soviets.

According to Sacia, most of Washington is embarrassed by the uprising of farmers over the dairy assessment; and at least five rural Congressmen saw defeat in the recent election, largely due to constituent anger over the dairy bill.

The lobbyist expressed optimism that the December collection of the first 50-cent assessment may be further delayed or halted, and urged those present to sign the petition circulating through the meeting assemblage. Additional petitions were available for farmers to circulate among their neighbors and business contacts. Farmers were also encouraged to send personal letters to their Congressional representatives.

The petition sent to Pennsylvania Congressional delegates outlined the history of the $1 assessment as explained during the meeting, and detailed the economic losses to individual farmers and the state's economy.

Further spelled out in the petition are Farmers' Union recommendations for alternate legislation, closely paralleling proposals offered to Congress earlier this year by Rep. Oberstar of Minnesota.

Section 8 of the petition recommends a four-part measure toward cutting back production:

— Set a base price of 75-percent parity;

— Each year set a production goal less than the previous years' base producton, so long as surpluses are a problem, which would apply to individual producers;

— Deduct a percentage of base price for all milk sold by the production goal; and

— Deduct an additional percentage for milk sold which exceeds the base year's sales.

"We can take a ten percent deduction in production, if we get a 22-percent price increase," noted Barbara Woods, a Franklin County dairy farm wife and PFU's vice president. "That's what the petition does; but the 50-cent assessment proposal doesn't address that."

The York meeting was the third in a series of four public awareness meetings on the dairy assessments held by Farmers' Union. According to area fieldman Chet Reed, 60 farmers met several weeks ago in Susquehanna County. Their petitions have already been forwarded to Secretary Block.

In a more recent session in Jefferson County, 130 dairy farmers converged to study PFU's proposals, sign and circulate petitions.

The final "protest" session is scheduled for Bradford County on Monday, Nov. 22, at the Fireplace Two Restaurant in Towanda. A dinner begins at 8 p.m. and those desiring reservations should contact the Farmers' Union offices. Farmers not wishing to join the group for dinner are urged to attend the informational session, set to begin at 8:45 p.m.

Copies of the PFU petition are available from the state office at One Ararat Boulevard, Harrisburg, 17110.

Pilgrims from Vietnam

BY M. EILEEN GRAHAM
Staff Correspondent

They are latter-day pilgrims who came here to start a new life and put the oppression of their homeland behind them.

Pham Xuan Chieu and his wife, Le Ha Nguyen, settled on a 112-acre Adams County hog and chicken farm in 1976, a year after the fall of Saigon to communist forces and the end of their long careers as freedom fighters and his work as a diplomat.

Chieu, a retired three-star Vietnamese lieutenant general and former ambassador to China, Taiwan and Korea, was the eldest child and the only son of a well-to-do North Vietnamese farmer.

He was pursuing studies in medical school when World War II brought the first in a series of oppressors to his country and he joined the fight for freedom which was to have no end.

When Le Ha gathered the members of their family still remaining in Saigon (including Pham's 86-year-old mother, five of their seven children, two grandchildren and a nephew) and left only two days before the fall of the city, it was the fourth time that she and her husband had fled their homeland since their youth.

A Korean friend painted this calligraphy which translates into an old saying advising men to be content with what they have achieved in life.

General Chieu recalls that when he came here in 1975, he was asked several routine questions by officials at the American Embassy, pertaining to his reasons for immigrating to the United States.

His first answer was that he wanted the opportunity for education for all his children. The second, he said, was that he wanted to be a farmer. That response brought a round of laughter from the counselor's staff, he recalls with a smile.

"But this is the dream of every man; when you advance in society, and when it is time to withdraw, you come to the land."

"We call this 'operation peace of mind,' " says his wife, "It is time to forget the past, time to go on."

Going on not only meant leaving a whole way of life behind with many of their treasured possessions, but also learning completely different methods of farming.

In Vietnam, "We have water agriculture. The rice fields are submerged in a foot of water and mud. Here the land is hilly and stony and we grow corn," the former general explains.

While in the military and diplomatic service, Chieu had several opportunities to visit the U.S. He traveled to other farming areas in Kansas, Texas, Louisiana, Florida and California. But he settled in Pennsylvania.

First, Le Ha says, they chose the area to be near two of their children who already had been enrolled in French-speaking schools in Canada. (French is the language of letters in Vietnam.)

Modern pilgrims, General and Mrs. Pham Xuan Chieu, are now Adams County farmers, living on their "Operation Peace of Mind" farm — a 112-acre hog and chicken farm near Gettysburg.

They decided to stay, Chieu says, because of the people.

"I like best the American farmer. I think he is number one. A small minority, they produce enough food not only for America, but for all the world."

But the farmer's life is not easy, "Now I realize that they suffer very much, like me. They are the first to suffer from recession and inflation and perhaps they will be the last to enjoy. But still I enjoy, I like farming."

Here, Chieu says, he has friends, neighbors and the county agent to help him, "I'm still learning and I try to survive."

Like many farm families, the Phams do all their own work. The weather doesn't always make it easy.

Snow and cold weather killed off a lot of their piglets last year when they couldn't shovel the long distance to the barn in time to tend all the newborns.

Chieu would like to modernize the old barns and install some mechanized equipment so hand feeding all the hogs isn't necessary, but the cost is prohibitive with an operation that is already losing money.

The 1980 drought didn't help their — 75-acre corn crop produced only one-fourth the grain they expected. This year's crop wasn't all that big, either, and as a result their sow population is down to 32.

Nevertheless, they are trying to improve the hog prospects and will build some new farrowing pens this year, Le Ha notes, with the help of their youngest son still living at home.

"The life of a farmer is always hope and hope," she says.

Le Ha helps all the sows at farrowing time and is in charge of the hog operation, grinding the grain and mixing in supplement after Chieu completes the harvest.

The farm's most successful project is Chieu's broiler business. He is under contract to feed and raise 40,000 chicks at a time from peeps to broiler size in seven weeks.

The company he works with supplys the feed and 200,000 chicks a year. "I supply the labor," he says.

When he built the broiler house, Chieu had hoped to pay off his debt in 10 years. "I've paid 6 years and now I realize I have 20 years left to pay," he says of spiraling interest rates.

On a recent trip to Washington D.C., Le Ha says her friends asked her if she was all finished working now and ready to settle back for the winter.

"My eyes got very big and I said, 'You know nothing about farming.'"

Her husband is very proud of Le

(Turn to Page B4)

In addition to tending her garden with its Chinese wintergreen and chili peppers, Le Ha spends time with the hogs on their Adams County farm.

Cinnamon leaf, an herb used in Vietnamese cooking, is grown by Madame Chieu, along with the Chinese wintergreen and chili papers she markets in Washington D.C.

What's Thanksgiving without turkey?

BY M. EILEEN GRAHAM
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Modern lovers of the traditional Thanksgiving main course would have had a comrade in Ben Franklin who nominated the turkey for our national emblem and deemed it a true original native of America, much more respectable than the bald eagle.

In fact, since the days of the first colonists, who soon replaced their traditional boar's head Christmas feast with the fowl which was found here in such abundance and called "firkee" by the American Indians, turkey has been the preferred meat for the holiday season.

It is said that some Indians domesticated turkeys, although most hunted them. The settlers followed suit and, although large flocks were often reported in Colonial times, the turkey nearly became an endangered species.

Chuck Fergus, a writer for the Wildlife Notes publications of the Pennsylvania Game Commission states in an article on wild turkeys that: "by 1800, market hunters were selling the birds for as little as six cents each. By the early 1900s — when eastern forests had been lumbered and periodic fires hampered their regeneration — the turkey was in trouble."

Their survival was, however, assured when game departments later used tax monies and fees from hunting license sales to implement conservation programs; and today the eastern wild turkey and its domestic counterparts are to be found in abundant supply.

The domestic bronze turkey is similar in coloring and is often mistaken by hunters for its wild cousin.

Robert M. Welty, an Adams County dairy farmer living near Gettysburg, has had a small flock of bronze turkeys for five years and says he always loses a few to hunters who mistakenly shoot them while they range in the woods behind his home.

Welty's turkeys run loose and will roost in trees or garages, on cars or farm vehicles, anything that happens to be handy, until they grow too large to fly very high. "It's not very funny if it's not your vehicle," says Peggy Welty, his wife. "They'll follow you right in the house if you leave the door open."

The big bronze birds are the scourge of neighborhood bicycle riders and a headache to the driver of a tank truck that arrives daily to haul the milk their 65 Holsteins produce.

"They're the funniest thing you've ever seen when they charge

Domestic turkeys like these are raised in large pole buildings and readied for market in 16 to 22 weeks. These turkeys are from the family operation of Glenn and Evelyn Kime of Adams County.

Ha's garden. This year she grew and sold crops of chili peppers and Chinese winter green at the market in Washington.

With a small variety of eggplant she grows, Le Ha prepares a traditional Vietnamese pickle.

Chieu likes the change of seasons here. "The four seasons give "quiet of mind" and are very good for farming, he feels.

In North Vietnam, they also have four seasons but the winter is not harsh and temperatures seldom go below 40 degrees. There, a farmer can harvest two crops a year, but the main crop is harvested in October as it is here.

At that time the Vietnamese have their own kind of Thanksgiving, a festival called "The First Rice."

"When the first crop is very good, you celebrate and offer first to the spirit who takes care of the crops...to our ancestors and the good earth, for gratitude," Chieu says.

He explains that most Vietnamese practice Confucianism which holds reverence for one's ancestors and is not so much a religion as a way of life.

Special food is cooked. The new rice, which is rich and sweet in taste, is cut when it's very young and still milky inside. The hulls are removed from the stalks by hand with chopsticks and the new rice is roasted to make it harder. Ten times the work goes into harvesting it, says Le Ha, and it is highly prized. Another less glutinous rice is also grown.

Still green and sweet-smelling, the rice will keep for as long as six months. In this country a similar grain is grown in Texas and called perfumed rice.

In his family, Chieu notes, wild duck is often served during The First Rice celebration, because the ducks fly in to eat the rice at that time of year.

"Like you eat the turkey here," smiles Le Ha. "But the turkey is too big." Later they will celebrate Tet, the Lunar New Year.

Many things in their lives have changed now; they work hard with their hands instead of their minds, their children are all grown, and they are far away from the excitement of international diplomacy and the bustling cities.

Even their names are changed in order. In their homeland it was the custom to list a man's family name first (Pham-Xuan-Chieu), while here people know them as Mr. and Mrs. Pham.

But they are content, "At last I feel I have a good grasp on my life," says Le Ha.

General Chieu smiles as he translates a work of calligraphy hanging on their living room wall. "It is an old saying," he explains, "which tells us that we must be content with what we have achieved and withdraw when it is time."

that truck. They just dare him to hit 'em," laughs Welty.

During the day the birds act as watch dogs, sounding alarm with a "putt" sound or "gobble-obble-obble." At night they sleep and are easy prey to dogs. "We've had dogs kill the whole flock," Welty notes.

Although his hens sometimes lay eggs, they have never hatched a peep. Domesticated turkeys are difficult to hatch, he says, explaining that due to the immense size of the birds when they are fed to produce meat, the male has a difficult time mating and fertilizing the female as he would in the wild. They are almost always artificially inseminated.

Poults are, therefore, bought from a hatchery. Welty buys his from Case Farm Hatchery in York County. Wild turkey poults are also sold by Case, but the owner says their success rate in hatching is so poor that they have been a money-losing venture and may be discontinued.

Welty claims his half-wild ranged birds have a better flavor than mass produced turkeys and

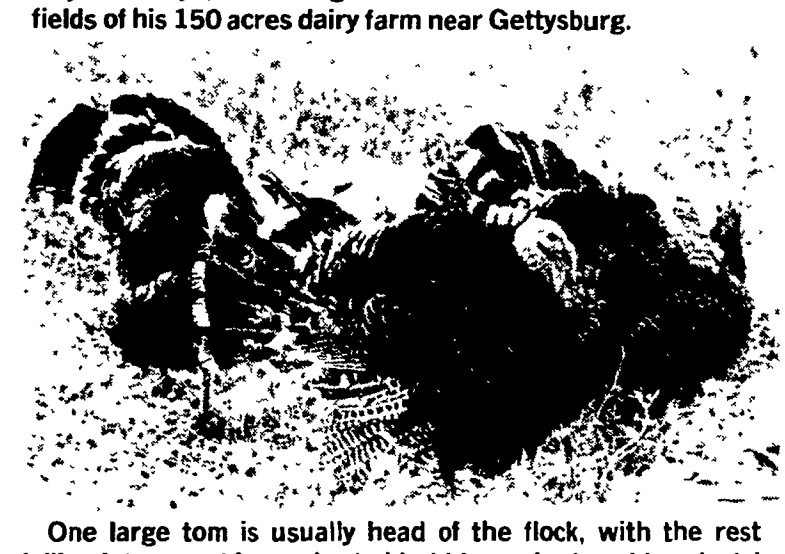
This 40-pound tom is weighed by Sunny Slope Farm owner Glenn F. Kime who markets 12,000 fresh and frozen turkeys a year in Adams County as well as Maryland and Washington D.C.

Robert Welty's flock of half-wild turkeys "peck their own way," he says, as the big bronze birds roam the woods and fields of his 150 acres dairy farm near Gettysburg.



One large tom is usually head of the flock, with the rest falling into a pecking order behind him as he fans his colorful bronze tail feathers and struts.

Add a personal touch at Thanksgiving with pie

Thanksgiving is one of those rare times that a family gathering doesn't produce panic when preparing the dinner menu.

Tradition has taken care of this worry — you'll no doubt serve turkey, filling, gravy, and potatoes or yams.

But you can add a personal touch to this traditional meal by preparing a very unique dessert. We suggest pie.

Congress has set aside Thanksgiving week as National Family Week. What better dish than pie is there to show your love for your family? Most pies take time, effort and patience — all the qualities you try to give to your family.

Happy Thanksgiving from everyone at Lancaster Farming.

Thanksgiving with turkey

says that the hens will dress out at 12 to 14 pounds, while the toms will reach 20 pounds or more.

"They're the cheapest thing to raise in the world. They just peck their own way," he says. But he does supplement their do-it-yourself diet with small amounts of shelled corn. "If we don't, they go to all the neighbors and beg," he explains.

Although they usually don't winter the birds over, Welty once kept an old tom he named "Gork" for three years. Finally the bird got so big that his weakened legs gave way and collapsed under him.

"You made hamburger out of him, didn't you?" asks his son, Dale. "No, he was a pet, we buried him," replies the 45-year-old dairy farmer.

Unlike Robert Welty, most of us don't have a resident flock of turkeys, but will rely on poultrymen like Glenn F. Kime of Sunny Slope Poultry Farm in northern Adams County to raise our holiday fowl.

Kime normally raises 12,000 white turkeys from poults each year and markets them during the Thanksgiving and Christmas season through about 50 bulk customers and individually to people who live in the area. Some go as far as Maryland and Washington D.C., he notes.

This year the price of turkey is up 10 cents a pound, he says, and profits will help offset the large losses most turkeymen suffered last year.

Kime explains that his Thanksgiving market is best. Right now the Sunny Slope dressing plant employs 20 people and will process 700 birds a day during the holiday season.

Within eight hours, the turkeys are killed, cleaned and packed in a modern operation that features an automatic scalder and a mechanized picker with rubber "fingers" that literally roll the feathers right off the birds.

Each turkey is then eviscerated and scrutinized by a federal inspector, washed inside and out and cooled in giant stainless steel tubs. Finally they are bagged with giblets and weighed, then placed in cold storage or frozen until transported to market.

Kime's Rose-a-Linda breed is an older variety. The hens are ready for market when they reach 16 to 18 weeks old and the toms are finished at 20 to 22 weeks, although Kime says feeding them for the maximum time produces a nicer finish.

Evelyn Kime has worked along with her husband since their start in the poultry business in 1947. And now their 26-year-old son, Lynn, is carrying on the tradition by overseeing the Sunny Slope egg operation which produces 21,000 eggs a day. A granddaughter also has a 4-H capon project this year, the Kimes note proudly.

In the 35 years since they started raising turkeys there have been many changes. Then, all labor was done by hand and dressed turkeys were cooled in wooden barrels with ice from the pond.

Now everything is stainless steel and automated.

Once turkey was available only during the holiday season, but now it is served year round, with modern processing producing products like ground turkey, turkey hot dogs, turkey roll and turkey ham.

It makes one wonder how Ben Franklin would have liked a turkeyburger.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It seems as though Thanksgiving is sneaking up on me. There are so many odd jobs to be done before winter really arrives.

I stood on the ladder and painted the porch until I ran out of paint. Then I raked and hauled leaves out of the yard for days. First the maples and pear, next the mulberry and apricots. What I really miss is Cindy's help at times like this. The popcorn has been hung high on a rafter to dry and the peanut stalks beside them.

The numbers had to be repainted on our aluminum boat as we hoped to go fishing one more time this year, but I doubt that we will accomplish this. As Allen my husband also works alone, he too has many things to do in a short time. It seems the manure pit simply doesn't get empty and so I've resigned myself to fishing in the Conestoga River that flows in front of our house.

One sunny, warm afternoon I sat on the bank and watched thirty of the neighbor's ducks bob up and down on the water as a brisk wind was blowing. I only caught one small fish. You see, when I take the fishing pole, then it is that I see pheasants, rabbits and squirrels. But when I carry a gun, then I see four big fish jump out of the water.

I've just added up my 1982 supply of canned and frozen vegetables and fruit and find that I've done almost 400 quarts this year. So I'm hoping that most of our six children will be able to come home for Thanksgiving so that I can share some with them. Another reason to give some away is so that I'll have room for the beef that we are getting this week.

Our children are now scattered all over the country from Seattle, Washington, to Wisconsin and even Maine. So I do realize the effort they must put forth to come home and share time and turkey with us.

Economy and convenience transform 18th Century turkey dish

LANCASTER — With convenience and budget as a prerequisite for a holiday entree, one of Thomas Jefferson's French dishes can still be part of any family's observance.

Jefferson's "Dindon a la Daube" entree was served at the White House during his administration. Today you can economically serve it to your family.

The original recipe was a "boned and stuffed turkey, served in a casserole," according to an historical reference.

A modern variation of Tom's Turkey uses a turkey breast, easier to bone, stuffed with a mix and cooked to perfection in an oven cooking bag. The oven cooking bag is an easy no-tending method for cooking meats moist and tender. Boning the turkey at home is not difficult and an excellent cost-cutting measure.

TOM'S TURKEY

1 tablespoon flour
1 package (7/8 oz.) turkey gravy mix
1 medium onion, sliced
2 stalks celery, sliced
1 cup water, divided
5 to 8 pound turkey breast
1 package (6 or 7 oz.) cornbread stuffing mix
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
½ pound bulk pork sausage (optional)

Preheat oven to 350F. Shake flour and turkey gravy mix in large size (14"x20") oven cooking bag; place bag in 13x9x2 inch baking pan. Spread onion and celery in bag along the length of the pan. Pour ½ cup water over vegetables. Combine stuffing mix, melted butter and ½ cup water. Cook, crumble and drain sausage; stir into stuffing. Spread stuffing along center and one half of boned turkey breast.

Fold turkey breast in half lengthwise; fasten edges and ends together with skewers. Brush surface of breast with vegetable oil. Place stuffed breast on top of vegetables inside bag. Close bag with nylon tie; make 6 half-inch slits in top of bag. Insert meat thermometer through slit in top of bag into thickest part of turkey breast.

Cook 2-¼ to 2-¾ hours or until meat thermometer registers 180-185F. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes before removing turkey from bag.

IF ALL SEED CORN IS ALIKE... WHY ARE SO MANY FARMERS SWITCHING TO CARGILL

Because harvest after harvest, Cargill delivers outstanding yields. These days, it takes careful management to make a profit. And it takes a hybrid that consistently performs like a winner. For Example:

- Top yielder 4 consecutive years in Penn State Zone 3 Tests (1979-82)
- Top yielder in various University of Maryland and University of Delaware Trials, with Cargill Hybrids ranking well above the average.

So if you're looking to improve your corn yields this year, join the farmers switching to Cargill. Give your Cargill Seeds Dealer a call today.

Sawdust farmer at KILE

By Dick Anglestein

(Dedicated to Nick Smith, 3½, son of Kenrick & Kathy Smith, Jeromesville, Ohio, who provided a bit of photographic diversion at KILE.)

Shows can get awfully boring,
When you're too small to show sheep;
And with the loud speaker roaring,
It's mighty tough to fall asleep.

So, if you're a little boy,
What do you do?
You take along a farm toy,
And play at the level of a shoe.

You rev up your big red machine,
The one with the rain-pocked rust;
Scuff up pants - once sparklin clean,
And start to farm the ringside sawdust.

While other adults, mom and pop
Are out there playing their game
With balky sheep that jump and hop;
You work at your sawdust farming fame.

Who knows what the future will bring,
A return to good fortune or more bust;
But here with his toys he's king
Of all little farmers who till sawdust.

Happy Thanksgiving, kids!

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

How To Carve A Turkey

Roasting the Thanksgiving turkey is no problem for many families: it's carving time that causes tempers to get on edge. In many families carving is something everyone thinks someone else can do better. Even the introduction of the electric knife a dozen or so years ago, didn't solve the problem.

I would like to share a method that can make carving a turkey a graceful and relatively simple task.

—Make sure your carving knife is firm and sharp. Have a large sturdy fork ready to brace the turkey while you carve.

—Cool the bird for about 20 minutes before you begin the carving process. During this period the juices return to the meat and it becomes firmer, so that slices don't come apart as you carve.

—Separate the leg — drumstick and thigh — by holding the drumstick firmly and pulling it away from the body. Then cut through the skin between the leg and body. When the skin is cut the entire leg will pull freely away.

—To remove the leg, press it away from the body. The joint connecting the leg to the backbone will often snap free or you can sever it with your knife point. Cut the dark meat completely from the body by following body contour carefully with your knife.

—Slice the dark meat by placing the leg on a separate plate and cutting through the connecting joint. You can slice the drumstick and thigh individually. Hold the drumstick with a napkin, and tilt it to a convenient angle while slicing toward the plate.

—To slice the thigh meat, hold the piece firmly with a fork. Cut even slices parallel to the bone.

—Prepare the breast for easy slicing by placing the knife parallel and as close to the wing as possible. Make a deep cut into the breast and cut to the bone. This is your base cut and all breast slices will stop at this cut.

—After the base cut, begin to slice the breast. Start halfway up the side, carving down, and ending at the base cut. Start each new slice slightly higher up the breast. Keep slices thin and even.

Do Holiday Shopping Early

It's time once again to plan your Christmas shopping, unless you're among those smart shoppers who are finished and have your gifts wrapped.

Being a smart Christmas shopper not only means shopping early in the season, but early in the day. The stores are less crowded, you'll be less tired and you won't be too hurried to make the special effort to be sure you're getting what you want.

I would like to offer the following suggestions for making your holiday shopping easier and more pleasurable. Leave the children at home when you have a heavy shopping schedule. If they want to shop or look at Christmas decorations in stores, make a few special trips just for them.

You'll especially want to shop early if you're counting on mail order houses to play Santa this year. The disappointments of substitutions, out-of-stock notices and delays from back-orders can beavoided if you send your order early.

Besides, ordering several weeks in advance of Christmas gives you time to return any unsatisfactory merchandise and make another gift selection.

Lancaster 4-H'ers 'round up' their lambs

The Supreme Champion Ewe title over all breeds entered in the annual round-up went to Jim Stauffer of Millersville. Jim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Stauffer, showed this Suffolk to earn champion in its breed and champion showmanship.

Reserve Champion honors in the market lamb competition went to Tricia Musser, daughter of Harold and Judy Musser of Elizabethtown. Tricia also earned a first place ribbon in the lightweight division.

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

MANHEIM — Fourteen-year-old Pam Yeagley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Yeagley of Elizabethtown, captured the Champion Market Lamb title last Friday night at the annual county round-up, here.

Pam's entry was a 7-month-old Hampshire which won first place in the heavyweight division. Pam is a secretary in the 4-H Woolies Club and attends Elizabethtown High School.

Winning reserve champion in the market lamb competition was Tricia Musser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Musser whose lamb won in the lightweight class also. Tricia, in her second year of 4-H, attends Elizabethtown Middle School.

Another coveted title, that of Supreme Champion Ewe in overall competition, was earned by Jim Stauffer for his Suffolk ewe lamb.

Jim, 19, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Stauffer of Millersville and has been a 4-H member with a lamb project for eight years. Last year Jim had the champion Suffolk also.

This year, Jim's 10-month-old entry earned him grand champion and ewe lamb champion titles in the Suffolk breed, in addition to that of Champion Showmanship.

Ellen Lewis was also a proud winner as she left the show ring that evening, for her lamb was designated champion of the owner-bred division.

Ellen is the 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis of Landisville. She is a song leader in the Woolies Club and attends the Centerville Junior High School.

Jennifer Wolgemuth emerged from a second place winning in the yearling ewe Hampshire class to capture the junior showmanship title.

Fitting titles went to Michele Mylin in the senior division and Tim Engle in the junior competition.

Fourteen-year-old Pam Yeagley earned the coveted champion market lamb title at last Friday's Lancaster County lamb round-up. Her entry was a 7-month-old Hampshire. Pam is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Yeagley of Elizabethtown.

Ellen Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis of Landisville, won reserve champion in its breed and champion owner-bred title with her Hampshire ewe.

'BB' at New Holland — Beautiful Beef (and Barn)

NEW HOLLAND — Last Friday and Saturday at the New Holland Sales Stables could well have been described as "BB Weekend" — meaning Beautiful Beef.

For no less than 75 head were paraded through the show ring last Friday by their proud youthful exhibitors in the Red Rose 4-H Baby Beef Roundup.

And if that wasn't enough, some 60 calves were shown Saturday morning in the Southeast District 4-H Beef Show.

Of course, when you say Beautiful Beef, they are exactly that. These are the calves which display more spit and polish than a young Marine recruit on basic training graduation day.

But the "BB" designation could also have stood for "Beautiful Barn." Almost as if in honor of the occasion, Abe Diffenbach, of the Sales Stables had the sale ring looking like a new "board room" with its sparkling paneling and glistening woodwork that still smelled of shellac.

But let's not take anything away from the real stars of the two days -- the 4-H'ers who have put many long months into their projects. Among the top winners:

—Grand champion of the Lancaster County Roundup was 15-year-old Kelly Rohrer, R5 Manheim, who previously had won the 4-H Division at the Manheim Fair a month ago.

—Reserve Lancaster County champion was John Frey, 11, from R2 Quarryville.

—Grand Champion showman was Fritz Frey, 15, R2 Quarryville, who received the Intelligencer Journal calf.

—Reserve Grand Championship honors in showing went to Michelle Dean, Strasburg, who received a $300 check from Lancaster Farming.

—On Saturday at the Southeast Show, which also included entries from Chester and Dauphin counties, grand champion was Robbie Rohrer, 13, of R1 Nottingham, who was showing from Chester County.

Beef and Lamb Show

—Reserve grand champion steer was exhibited by Mike Messick, Middletown, a member of the Dauphin County club.

All in all, with the double shows, the selection of 31 Lancaster steers to move on to Harrisburg, and the Saturday afternoon sale, it was a busy couple of days for the 4-H'ers, parents, leaders and friends.

And quite a lot of friends appeared to show up at the sale, which will go down in the record books as one of the most brisk and competitively attractive for the youngsters in quite a few years.

As one bidder put it:

"There for awhile, I wasn't sure I was going to get in at all."

Here are just a few facts about the sale, which included market lambs that were shown Friday night at Manheim:

—Pam Yeagley's grand champion lamb brought $3.80 a pound from New Holland Sales Stables for a total $463.60.

The reserve champion Lancaster County lamb goes to Wilmer Kreider, Willie the Butcher. "Smiling" exhibitor is Jason Wolgemuth.

—The reserve champion of Jason Wolgemuth captured $2.00 a pound from Wilmer Kreider, Willie the Butcher, at Stauffer Markets.

—Even without the champions, the other 14 head that were sold averaged $1.13 a lb. or some 55 cents above weekly market price.

—Willie the Butcher was back in the ring for the grand champion steer at $2.05 a pound for Robbie Rohrer.

—The reserve champion of Mike Messick went to Twin Pine Auto at $1.45 a pound.

—And without the champions, the remaining 64 steers averaged 77 cents per pound, or some 16.4 cents above the weekly market price.

The New Holland Sales Stables arena was literally wall-to-wall people and many of them were active bidders.

The buyers included:

New Holland Sales Stables, Willie the Butcher, Harold Engle of Elizabethtown, H.D. Mast, Dr. Hesloff, Country Club of Harrisburg, Union National Bank of Maytown and Mount Joy, Vintage Sales Stables, Wayne Wydman, Paul Risk Associates, Earl Umble, Twin Pine Auto, Martin Paving of Ephrata, Virginia Cattlemen's Association, Blue Ball National Bank, Agway of Salunga, Lehman Shope.

Interstate women's program addresses imitations, promotion, pricing

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Imitations, promotion, pricing and the $.50 assessment all got their share of attention at the women's program during the Interstate Milk Producers annual meeting held last week in Lancaster.

The women not only learned more about the marketing of the product which is their livelihood, but they also had the opportunity to express some of their concerns and ideas for the future.

Susan Winner, a New Jersey farm wife, who with her husband Robert, shares the duties of co-chairing the young couples program for Interstate, expressed her opinion that rather than an assessment, "a much more effective way of dealing with the problem is to increase consumption."

Susan pointed out that according to statistics provided by UDIA, thirty percent of the dairy market is held by imitators, which means $55.2 billion lost to imitation products.

She noted that 70 percent of the butter market goes to margarine and 50 percent of the cream market goes to non-dairy creamers.

She said, "Consumers purchase imitation products because of the low price, and sometimes without knowing it." She explained that half of the pizzas in stores are using imitation cheeses.

"It is a problem we dairy wives can address. There are so many delicious ways to serve dairy products. We have to teach Moms how to do it."

Explaining the dairy price support program, Winner pointed out that it came about because of the relatively new surplus in the last few years which is causing the Commodity Credit Corporation to spend more and more on dairy purchases.

She said the surplus can be attributed to the fact that other agricultural commodities are depressed, and since dairy provides year-round income it is an attractive ag industry to enter. She said the job market off the farm is so poor that many sons are choosing to stay on the farm. With the beef market depressed, she said many farmers are hanging onto cull cows, and with low feed prices, they can afford to continue to feed them.

She said that Interstate will be collecting the $.50 beginning in December and will deduct it from the second monthly check. It will be sent directly to CCC.

Under the second part of the program scheduled to go into effect in April, Susan said the money will be refundable under a system giving it back to farmers who reduce their production by the same percentage as the surplus percentage.

The base period for establishing that amount will be either an average of 1981 and 1982, or will be based soley on 1982. At no time, Susan said, will the farmer be asked to cut back more than the percentage of the surplus for that year.

She pointed out the obvious problems - that the surplus will increase production as farmers strive to maintain their cash flow and that it will decrease the net farm price because there will be no change in the store. She concluded, "The administrative burdens will be enormous."

This prompted a member of the audience to ask exactly what portion of the collected money will go for administration of the program.

Jim Fraher, assistant economist for Interstate and moderator of the panel, said they expect to collect $880 million in the first year of the program including the first $.50 beginning in December and the second $.50 to begin in April. They are projecting the administrative costs to be $2 million, a figure he called "insignificant."

The reasons for the low projected cost is that existing agencies will collect the money.

W.W. Moffett, Jr., director of the division of dairy industry for the New Jersey Department of Agriculture, discussed various pricing efforts across the country noting, "There is some type of regulation in effect in every developed country of the world." He said the regulations vary considerably from fixing prices to the farmer, to the stores and to consumers to fixing prices only to the farmers, generally under federal orders. Pennsylvania is one of the few states left doing regulation of all three.

New Jersey suspended its minimum price to consumers and now they cannot sell below the cost of production. Their milk prices are among the lowest in the nation, Moffett said.

"Milk control is a highly emotional issue," according to Moffett. "Milk control is designed for the consumer's benefit. The greatest benefit to the consumer is that they are assured an adequate supply of milk at reasonable prices. A stable market is also important to dairy farmers, he said because they cannot make investment without a guarantee of a fair return.

Michael Donavan, general manager of Eastern Milk Producers, spoke on trends in marketing, saying he feels there will be more and more concentration with fewer bottlers in the future and extremely large production units. As business concentrates in fewer, larger units, the co-op will take a larger role, he asserted.

In the long standing debate of generic versus brand advertising, Donavon says that consumers are more price conscious than brand conscious. He added, "The majority of sales are store brand, and they are usually comparatively priced with national brands."

He said brand labeling is more important with by-products such as cottage cheese and sour cream than with whole milk.

Donavan revealed that research shows domestic sales of processed dairy products advancing by 45 percent in the 1980's. Cheese will increase from 6.2 billion in 1981 to $915 billion in 1990. He sees increased competition by cheese substitutes, but he feels they are a small part of the total market. He noted that by the year 2,000, however, imitations will be a substantial part of the market, but mostly as blends.

Yoghurt sales will increase by 31 percent, but ice cream sales will increase just two percent.

Whole milk sales will drop by 25 percent, but low fat milk will advance 31 percent. By 1990 Donavan reported, ninety-four percent of whole milk sales will be in low fat items. Skim and butterfat consumption will drop slightly and heavy cream and sour cream will experience a 25 percent growth.

He said it is important for the cooperative leadership and boards of directors to understand and study the trends of the future to deal effectively with marketing milk.

Jim Sumner, director of the bureau of markets at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, discussed the defeat of the milk marketing referendum, concluding "there was no sole reason for its defeat."

He said the Pennsylvania dairy industry is a barometer of the nation and its feelings and that if the referendum had been successful it would have "sent a signal to Washington, D.C. and maybe we wouldn't face the $.50 assessment." He noted, "It is difficult to gain support for a referendum where you assess yourselves."

The presentations by the panel sparked much discussion among the women attending the convention. They are obviously concerned about the future of their industry and want to be well informed.

Fresh-market mushrooms brighten a dark industry

UNIVERSITY PARK — The prospects of a quick recovery for Pennsylvania's mushroom industry look grim, says a Penn State researcher.

Paul Wuest, professor of plant pathology, says three consecutive years of increasing production costs and decreasing prices have taken a toll on mushroom farmers.

"Pennsylvania mushroom farmers are in a very precarious financial position," he reports. "The fact is, there is a good number of mushroom growers who are losing money."

The biggest losers, in his view, are the farmers selling mushrooms exclusively to the processed market for canning and freezing. Those who have sold part of their crop to the fresh market have shown modest profits, he says.

A farmer's average earning for a pound of mushrooms during the 1970's was roughly 75 cents. The price has since dropped to 62 cents.

One reason for this, Wuest suggests, is that demand has fallen. He contends that mushrooms are now considered more a delicacy than a necessity, and that consumers are buying fewer mushrooms.

Moreover, he says, the number of processed mushrooms imported from countries like Hong Kong and the Peoples Republic of China has increased dramatically in the past few years. Because imported mushrooms are produced less expensively than domestic mushrooms, they can be sold for less.

Pennsylvania farmers, Wuest notes, have had to take lower prices to meet the competition from abroad.

"Many farmers are using capital from past investments to keep their businesses going. Some of them have borrowed heavily against their assets," he says. "These people are getting deeper in debt, and they're on their way to being out of business."

The growing supply of imported mushrooms, Wuest says, has no doubt reduced the demand for mushrooms from processing industries in southeastern Pennsylvania. The processor, like the farmer, is suffering, he believes.

However, if past trends are an indication, the situation is bound to improve over the long run, Wuest predicts.

"There's never been a time when mushroom prices have dropped this far and this consistently," he says. "But I have to believe that in the next year or two, mushrooms will be purchased in larger quantities, as they were two years ago."

Meanwhile, he expects farmers and industry officials to take steps to help themselves. Research is under way, for example, to see how a mushroom with greater eye-appeal can be developed. Consumers would find attractive a mushroom that is smoother and lighter in color, Dr. Wuest says.

He also believes the industry will develop a fresh mushroom with a longer shelf life. Now, fresh mushrooms appear the best for between five and seven days, but it sometimes takes as many as four days to get the crop from farm to consumer market. Wuest explains the industry will try to breed a mushroom that can grow during the summer between temperatures of 68 and 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

Mushrooms now must be grown during the summer in rooms cooled to 58-60 degrees. A new strain would make it possible for farmers to save on energy costs.

Farmers outside Pennsylvania are faring better than their counterparts because they sell more of their crop to the fresh market, where the price is higher. Pennsylvanians have historically organized themselves around processing plants.

"Some farmers even formed cooperatives and built their own plants," he says. "Now, however, many Pennsylvania growers are shifting to the fresh market."

Century Farm

Ferree farm boasts simple but productive history

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

KIRKWOOD — Few farms, especially those with a history of more than a century, are able to escape the unfortunate mishaps that befall many farms — fire, bankruptcy, major land purchases followed by tragic losses, juggled owners and sad memories.

But there is one farm in southwestern Lancaster County in a little burg christened Kirkwood which can claim an untarnished history of at least 121 years.

Its history has been so lackadaisical in fact, that the true historian may mistakenly term its narrative dull.

Not so, according to present owner M. Isabel Ferree who has lived on the farm her entire life and is especially proud that her farm has been awarded a Century Farm title by the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry. Instead of finding her farm dull, Ms. Ferree optimistically describes her farm's growth as having "been pretty smooth through the years."

Appropriately located on Maple Shade Road (the farmhouse is shaded by numerous maple trees) the farm contains the original barn and house, and a hogpen, shed and garage.

For anyone visiting the farm, there might be that first reaction of disappointment, because there are no traditional farm 'qualities' which greet the senses. There is no farm equipment resting on the premises as a sign of a busy harvest season. There are no sounds of cattle grazing in the fields or standing in the barnyard. There is no 'farm smell' lingering in the air.

But once inside the house, visitors discover that Ms. Ferree is the force which brings the farm to life as she relates its history.

Her grandfather, George A. Hogg, bought the farm in March 1880, paying $5744.80 for its 97 acres.

Following Hogg's retirement, the farm was operated by four of his five children until 1912 when his twin daughters Lena and Leta and their husbands, (who, by the way, were also brothers) W. Washington Ferree and Edgar E. Ferree, began farming it.

After one year of this partnership, Edgar and Leta Ferree moved away and Washington and Lena, parents of Isabel, continued farming it and finally purchased it in 1932 from the George A. Hogg heirs (Lena's brothers and sisters).

In 1956, C. Martin Greenleaf Sr., a grandson of Hogg who was also born in the farmhouse, began farming the estate while Lena and her daughter Isabel, now a school teacher, lived in the farmhouse. Greenleaf Sr. changed the operation from dairy to steers. Isabel says her grandfather had a dairy in which he separated the cream from the milk and that he churned butter.

Isabel inherited the farm in 1962 and Greenleaf continued farming it until his retirement in 1976. His son C. Martin Greenleaf Jr. then took over the farming.

Greenleaf Jr. still farms the estate today along with four other farms, one of which he owns. On the Ferree farm, he raises corn, wheat, barley, hay and soybeans. Though there are usually Angus cattle housed at the farm, he says presently the barn is only being used to store hay. Greenleaf Jr. lives in Oxford with his wife Judy and two children, Wendi, 12 and Bob, 5.

Ms. Ferree remembers that the farm was purchased from Howard Whiteside by her Grandfather Hogg for $59 an acre.

The only changes to occur in the farm's appearance were an addition of a kitchen by Hogg, the construction of a tenant house on the other side of Maple Shade Road, by her parents, and the replacement of a carriage house for a car shed by Ms. Ferree herself.

She also remembers finding the date '1861' behind some wallpaper in one of the bedrooms, thus designating an age of at least 121 years.

But the farm's history isn't Ms. Ferree's favorite pastime. She taught elementary school for 43 years; of which 11 years were devoted to a one-room school. Her teaching skills have reached into the schools of Colerain, East Pikeland and Oxford.

Perhaps it was her fond memories of school during her childhood which prompted Ms. Ferree to dedicate her life to the profession. She relates how, when a small girl, she always had to come straight home at day's end because her mother could see the schoolhouse from her window. "I never got to play along the way like the other children did," she laughs.

Other memories dear to Ms. Ferree are large fields of potatoes grown every year by her parents, and oodles and oodles of ducks waddling around the yard and driveway. These ducks were her personal project as a youngster.

After eight years in grade school, a couple years in high school and one additional year at Quarryville, she attended Millersville State College to become a teacher.

Today, retired from teaching, Ms. Ferree keeps busy collecting salt and pepper shakers, taking care of her house with its antiques and framed sketches of her grandfathers neatly hung on the living room walls, and participating in various organizations.

This is the large Ferree farmhouse as it looks today. The present owner and her mother were both born in this house, as was C. Martin Greenleaf, cousin of Ms. Ferree who farmed the estate for many years.

These snapshots were taken in the early '50s when a major windstorm caused damage to the maple trees surrounding the estate. The farm, appropriately located on Maple Shade Road, has not changed much in its 121-year history except for a few coats of paint on the barn and house, an addition to the barn, a new garage and a new kitchen.

Kathy Snook wears Polled Hereford crown

The 18-year-old daughter of Edward and Nancy Snook of R4 Jersey Shore brought two of her three Polled Hereford females to the annual competition.

Kathy, who works on her parents' hog farm in Lycoming County, bought her first Polled Hereford last June. One of her first bouts in the Polled Hereford show ring found her winning grand and reserve grand honors at her local county fair in the female division, and champion Polled Hereford steer. She also competed at the 1982 Pa. Farm Show and will be returning to Harrisburg this January with her two heifers, purchased from Flat Stone Lick Farms of Washington County.

Along with her duties as this year's Polled Hereford Queen, Kathy is active in her local 4-H community club, serving as president. She also is president of the Lycoming County 4-H Council.

Last week Kathy was elected secretary of the Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Junior Association. Other newly elected officers of the breed youth association include: Jay Kirschner of Monongahela, president; Lowell Midla of Marianna, vice president; and Rodney Monn of Shippensburg, treasurer.

Eighteen-year-old Kathy Snook of R4 Jersey Shore reigns as this year's Pa. Polled Hereford queen. Last week she competed in her first Keystone International Livestock Exposition, leading her two heifers purchased from Flat Stone Lick Farms into the show ring at Harrisburg.

Ferree farm

Included among these are Farm Women Society 15, the same society to which her mother belonged, the XYZ Club (Extra Years of Zest), and the United Presbyterian Church. Ms. Ferree will be a corresponding secretary and program chairman for Society 15 soon and is a teacher at her church's Sunday School and is a choir member.

Greenleaf Jr., the current operator of the farm, is fair director, and a member of both PFA and the Colerain Planning Commission. His wife Judy is also a member of Society 15.

Both Ms. Ferree and Greenleaf Jr. seem pleased with the passive, simple, yet productive history the farm has accumulated and hope that it continues thus in the future.

"I was very impressed with my first SBM brooder"

Don Kauffman
Columbia, Pennsylvania

"I could see it worked well and would last," says Don. "I compared SBM to 600 watt electric heaters using pigs the same age: pigs under SBM reached 40 lbs. when my other pigs were still at 35 lbs... with the exact same amount of feed. The SUNNYPIG hogs were cleaner on concrete and looked healthier. Even when they were on the truck, you could tell which hogs had been under SBM." Don goes on, "Since then I've bought 20 more SUNNYPIGS. Boy, do they put out heat!"

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

A recent article headline from our church affiliate national magazine sort of painfully stabbed me right between the "worry and grouch" lobes of my brain last week.

"Be Grateful For Small Problems," ran the title of the article, which almost seemed to be written just for me — at least on some days.

Just that morning, I'd grumbled because the water in the calf pen barely trickled from the faucet. It does that when the cows in the dairy barn are gulping water between mouthfuls of silage, and when the automatic washing unit is filling to clean the milkers and pipelines.

And, quite often, that's all happening at the same time I'm feeding calves — and always on those days when a meeting time, or appointment, or writing deadline looms.

I can trot down around the barn and briefly shut off the washer. Or I could rearrange my calf-feeding schedule and go to the barn earlier or later.

Instead, I grumble, forgetting that for millions the only water available for drinking, bathing, or washing clothing comes from a stinking, open sewer. Others have no water at all, and carry it long distances at personal sacrifice.

Mutter, mutter. Grumble and gripe. Fuss at the husband or kids, because some trivial inconvenience messes up out stuffed schedule of things to be done. Mechanical servants (monstrosities, I often fume!) have so greatly altered our lives for the better, and yet can so anger us.

A car that balks, the TV gone fuzzy, washing machine spinner that doesn't, tractor with a dead battery — how aggravating they can be.

And yet, we need only pause and think, really think, that even in the midst of a long recession and stagnant economy, how well-off we Americans are in this United States.

Farmers reel under the price-depressing accumulations of staggering overproduction in a country so basically well-fed that weight-watching has become a national obsession. At the same time, millions of babies around the world wake with hunger pains and bloated bellies of creeping starvation.

How ironic, how sad, that our problems could instead be the salvation to so many others if political differences were set aside.

As we once again pause to celebrate the season of Thanksgiving, may we rejoice for the peace and plenty in which we live.

But, more importantly, may we offer prayers that the selfish differences of nations might be overcome with a sharing of bounty and goodwill among all peoples.

WHAT THIS MAN KNOWS ABOUT FARMING COULD FILL A BOOK... A BANK BOOK.

Farming. It's a complex business. No surprise to you, of course. We only mention it because when it comes to getting a farm loan, we know you don't want to have to start at ground zero and explain the expenses of livestock, machinery, construction, mortgages and operating expenses to a novice loan officer.

Which is why we suggest you turn to Bob Badger, the head of our Agricultural Loan Division. Bob knows farming — inside out and upside down. He's been helping our community's farmers meet their business objectives for years. So when it comes to farm loans, he takes a very interesting point of view ... yours.

Next time you need to talk to a banker about financing your business, talk to the banker who understands your business ... Bob Badger at Bank of Lancaster County. Visit Bob at our Strasburg office or give him a call and ask him to visit you.

York Farm Women receive pins

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Members of the York County Society of Farm Women, of age 80 and over, earned special recognition during the group's 43rd annual convention recently at St. Matthew Lutheran Church.

Custom-designed pins, heart-shaped in gold with an enameled pink hollyhock, the Farm Women symbol, were presented to 58 of the county's members, along with a standing ovation from the audience of 300.

Unable to attend the ceremony honoring the senior Farm Women members was county organization founder, 91-year-old Mabel Rishel. # Dietz wears Hampshire sheep crown

HARRISBURG — A York County sheep producer has been selected the first Pennsylvania Hampshire Sheep queen.

Mary Lynn Dietz, Loganville, won her crown and banner during November 6 judging at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition. She is the 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Dietz, breeders of registered Hampshire sheep on their Walnut Valley Farm.

A sophomore at Shippensburg State College, Mary Lynn is majoring in elementary education, with a minor in Spanish, and plans a teaching career.

Contestants in the first state queen competition took part in interviews, a fashion and lead-line show in which wool outfits were worn, and gave an oral presentation on the sheep industry. For her presentation, Mary Lynn prepared a sheep management informative talk aimed at elementary age youngsters, based on experiences working with her animals in the family flock of 36 head.

As a representative of both the state and national Hampshire sheep breeders', the Pennsylvania queen will make numerous appearances at show and sale functions.

Mary Lynn Dietz

Among her first official functions will be taking part in the 1983 state Farm Show preview program for the Governor at the Farm Show building, in January.

Other planned appearance include the Pa. summer sheep sale, area fairs, and the 1983 Keystone International Livestock Exhibition.-JB

Rep. Hayes receives Am. Farmer Degree

Pennsylvania's House Majority Leader Samuel Hayes returned from his trip to the National FFA convention in Kansas City, where he served as one of three judges for the public speaking contest, with an Honorary American Farmer Degree. Earlier this year Rep. Hayes was honored with the distinction of receiving an Honorary Keystone Farmer Degree. During high school, Hayes served as president of his Warriors Mark FFA Chapter.

Potholders with personality

Potholders make perfect gifts, especially when you give them "personality." You can stitch on the most intriguing faces with ease, with nothing but fabric scraps and embroidery threads.

All you need for the project is felt, denim or most any other medium-weight fabric, polyester batting, and some ordinary sewing supplies. Even children will find "personality potholders" simple to make.

Here are directions for the potholders:

MATERIALS: Felt, denim, duck or other medium- to heavy-weight, non-stretch fabric; contrasting fabric scraps; polyester batting; embroidery threads; paper and pencil; sewing supplies; iron.

Optional: Fusible webbing to bond facial features and other details to potholders.

DRAWING THE FACES: 1. For each potholder, draw an 8 inch circle from polyester batting. 2. Using the paper drawing as a pattern, cut facial features and other details from fabric scraps. 3. Cut facial features and other details from fusile webbing.

POTHOLDER FRONT: 1. Assemble facial features and details on potholder front. 2. Match fusible webbing to the fabric scraps on the potholder. Slip webbing under the scraps. 3. Press fabrics to potholder, following directions on package of fusible webbings. Or, if you aren't using webbing, baste scraps to potholder. 4. Using a wide satin stitch, sew scraps to potholder by hand embroidery or zig-zag machine. 5. Embroider additional details as desired.

POTHOLDER LOOP: 1. Cut a 1½x4 inch strip of fabric. 2. Turn under ¼ inch hem on long edges. 3. Fold strip in half length-wise, with wrong side inside. 3. Fold strip in half lengthwise, with wrong side inside. 4. Machine stitch side edge.

ASSEMBLY: 1. With right sides of potholder inside and batting outside, put all three circles together. 2. Fold potholder loop in half. Sandwich loop between potholder front and back. Match raw edges of loop to top edge of potholder. 3. Machine-stitch potholder all around, leaving an opening for turning. 4. Trim batting close to seam. Clip curves. 5. Turn potholder to right side. Turn raw edges to inside.

FINISHING: 1. Topstitch potholder around outside edges. 2. Remove any remaining basting stitches or loose threads.

Fast facts

- Durable Patz hook-and-eye link chain allows easy maintenance. Progression forging builds extra strength into hook-and-eye link contact points. Final heat treating increases hardness, strength and wear resistance.
- Choice of two link sizes to match gutter length.
- Four-tooth sprocket drives every link. Each sprocket tooth drives each link behind the hook--the link's thickest and strongest point. No need to buy larger sprockets to compensate for wear.
- Flexibility for various layouts.
- Select 2" steel angle flites for solid manure or 4" high flites for slurry manure. Flites are welded to Patz links.
- Three drive unit sizes match your gutter length and allow expansion
- Corner wheel top-and-bottom flanges guide the chain around the corner. Corner wheel assemblies remove easily for service without concrete breakout.
- Automatic chain tightener.
- Heavy-gauge steel slide with steel center beam for added strength.

Who won the shootout between Pioneer, Funks, DeKalb and Jacques?

Side-by-side tests are the best way to check out new hybrids before you grow them in your own big fields.

As usual, Jacques has done a lot of side-by-side testing for you all across the corn belt. Major competitive hybrids were planted along side of Jacques hybrids and harvested for the whole world to see.

That way with these results of 637 tests, you don't have to have shootouts in your own fields. You can just go with the top hybrids.

What's even more important all the results are published whether we won or lost. Who else runs corn trials where they put their hybrids up against the strongest competitors and then tells the results, even when they lose?

What happened in the shootouts? The chart at the right tells the story. It shows how well Jacques hybrids did against Pioneer, Funks and DeKalb. All the results aren't in yet but when they are, we'll show you who won and lost in the shootout for your local area.

So here's the first shots in the big shootout. In a few more weeks all the results will be in and our new 1982 Yieldbook will be ready. See your Jacques dealer for a copy or send in the coupon and we'll mail you a free copy. Do it right away.

*Pioneer, Funks and DeKalb are brand names.

Cassel farm is 141-year-old legacy

BY SHEILA MILLER

MANHEIM — It all began 141 years ago when Joseph Cassel purchased a 92½-acre farm in Penn Township, Lancaster County. Since then this limestone farm has become a legacy in the Cassel family as five generations assumed the honor and responsibility of ownership of this prime farmland.

On Thursday evening, 49-year-old John F. Cassel and family received the honor of having their farm designated as one of six Century Farms in Lancaster County for 1982. According to John, he acted on the prompting by daughter Sherry Maestle, an employee for Penn-Jersey Harvestore, in "entering our name" for consideration in the program which honors farms that have remained in one family for at least a hundred years.

John took time out of his hectic corn shelling schedule on Wednesday morning to talk about the farm's history. Digging out a time-yellowed deed, he read down over the four Cassel men who owned the farm since 1841 until the time he purchased the farm from his grandfather in 1967.

The farm passed from Joseph Cassel to son John Cassel in 1860. In 1900, the farm became the property of John H. Cassel who in turn passed it to John K. Cassel in 1919.

John smiled as he recalled the dramatic changes his grandfather John K. brought to the farm. John remembered how his grandfather was one of the first farmers in the area to specialize in a single agricultural enterprise — that being dairy farming.

"My grandfather was a progressive farmer. If there was an improvement to be made, or something new, he had it," John said with pride.

"This farm was a dairy farm from 1929 until 1977," he added, pointing out that health and labor problems prompted his own departure from the dairy business five years ago. John has since converted his existing barn into a hog fattening facility — marketing 2,000 hogs a year.

The John F. Cassel farm, R7 Manheim

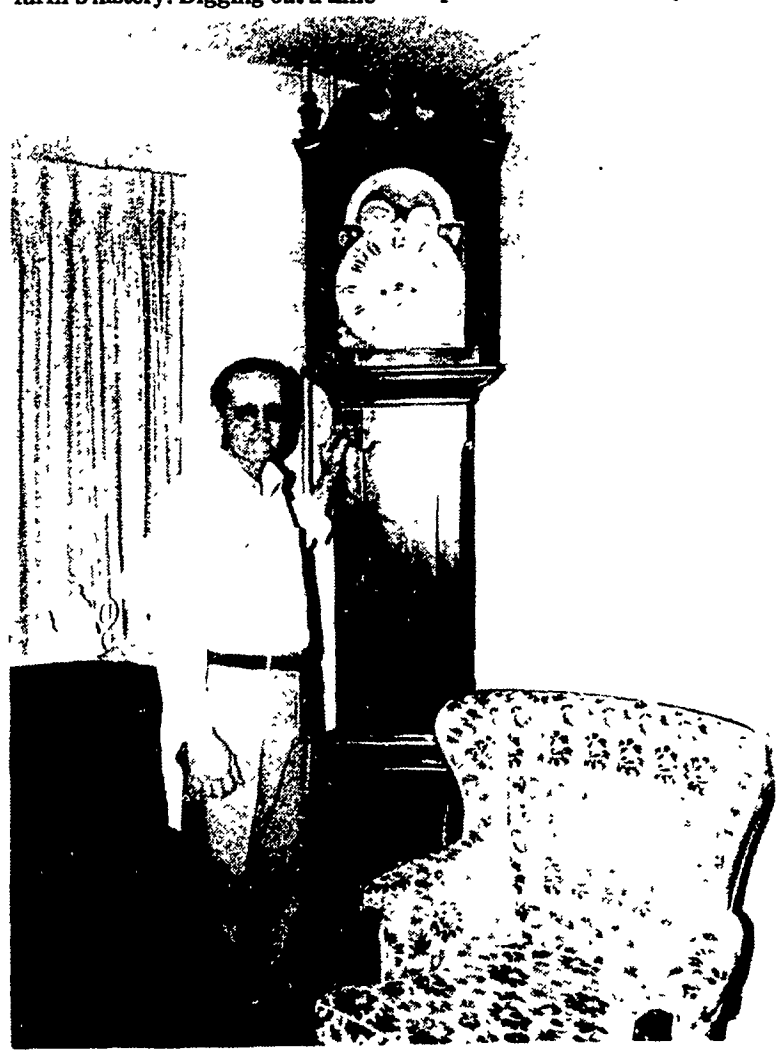
John and Lorraine Cassel of R7 Manheim look over the family's deed to the 92½-acre farm that was passed from generation to generation of Cassels since 1841. In the background is the "Cassel Corner" of their living room, featuring the family's restored butcher table and solid black walnut cupboard built with wooden pegs.



John F. Cassel is quite proud of the grandfather's clock that he received from his own grandfather, John K. Cassel, proprietor of the family farm from 1919-67.

Although there is no date stone on the old limestone house which the Cassel family has called home for the past 100 or so years, the house is of enviable age for fancier's of historic homes. Thick stone walls require deep window ledges which are ideal for raising house plants and displaying bric-a-brac.

"Years ago, farmers around here only had a few cows," John continued. "But back in the early '30s, my grandfather had a herd of 60 or 70 cows. That was a large operation for those times. And I continued with the same number of dairy animals until I went out of the business.

"Back then, too, the emphasis was on butterfat. So one-third of my grandfather's herd consisted of Guernseys, with two-thirds Holsteins. That was the makeup of his herd until the early '40s when butterfat wasn't as important and he went to all Holsteins."

Milk from the John K. Cassel herd was shipped to Moore Dairy in Lancaster — a dairy that no longer is in business. When grandson John took over the dairy operation in 1958, the milk from his Holstein herd was shipped to Penn Dairies in Lancaster. Young John leased the farm from his grandfather from 1958 until 1967 when he purchased the property.

Another area where John remembers his grandfather as an innovative farmer is in machinery.

"I was six years old when the last of the horses went," John said, after some thought. "That's when we got our second tractor (1939)."

The first tractor that worked its way into the Cassel operation appeared in the early 1930s. It featured cleated tracks instead of wheels. John's grandfather bought his first rubber tired tractor — a John Deere B — in 1936.

John recalled how he and the other children of the family gleaned their first experiences of tractor-driving aboard the old cleat tractor.

"My folks often told me I was only five years old when I started working in the field — but that was on the tobacco wagon. I was seven or eight when I started driving the tractor and disking," he said with a smile. "I never worked with the horses.

"I never had any accidents, either — just a lot of dirt and heat with those cleats," he added. "Now I have a tractor with a cab and air conditioning — that's a pleasure to run compared to the old cleat tractor."

Another area where grandfather John K. was progressive was in his thoughts about farmland preservation, recalled John's wife Lorraine.

"He was always emphatic that this land remains a farm," she said. "It would always get his Dutch up when people would buy farms and make golf courses out of them."

John said he shares his grandfather's sentiments on keeping the farm in agriculture "pretty well" but admitted that suburban pressures could pose a problem. However he added he didn't feel he would have to think about that problem "during my time." Some insurance against being surrounded by acre-lot houses is the fact that John's brother,

Herrs live history each day of their lives

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

Farm life has no comparison on earth. It is the last bastion of wholesome existence in which a family can establish roots and nurture a continuing growth for generation after generation.

Take the Herr family as an example.

The name is synonymous with Lancaster County. When you think of Lancaster, the name automatically comes to mind – much like Kennedy in Massachusetts or duPont in Delaware.

But the Herr family, such as that of Harry G. and Kathryn Herr, 2125 South View Road, Lancaster, can carry their farm heritage one, ultimate step farther. Each day of their lives, the family members literally live and breathe history.

The eighth generation on the 100-acre rolling farm, 75-year-old Harry and 70-year-old wife, Kathryn, are retired nearly a decade from actively operating the farm, which dates back some 242 years in the family.

But the family ties will continue. Son, Donald, is now operating the farm and his sons, Eric, 13, and Jason, 8, will be the 12th generation on the land.

The family's daily association with history ranges from the sheepskin deed from Thomas and William Penn to John and Abram Hare (the original spelling of Herr) to the large double-deck, stone-gable barn that the Pennsylvania Historical Commission used as a guide to rebuild the barn at the Rockford Plantation of General Hand.

"The stone barn is dated 1761," Herr explains.

"A lot of people don't believe it.

"But the stone ends are set on bedrock and where none is available the ends are arched.

"A large wooden ramp was built to get the top stones in place.

"Can you imagine the amount of wooden scaffolding that would have been required to wheel those stones up there by hand."

Just at their front door, the Herrs also have some living history – a male and female holly tree.

"It's supposed to be the second highest holly tree for this latitude," Herr said.

"Back in 1951, Norm Reber of Pennsylvania Farmer counted the rings and said it was 175 years old."

The Herrs keep spraying and caring for the trees, but admit they have noticed that the trees are starting to show their age a bit.

The Herr farm includes some 26 grade Holsteins, about 20 cattle being fattened, 10 acres in tobacco and the other tillable land in wheat, corn and hay.

Harry also recalls the family's first tractor, an Oliver, bought back in 1938 – just a little bit before he took over from his father.

Family photos show such things as an old Peerless steam rock crusher that was used in the construction of the road. If you look closely Harry, then five years old, is barely visible on it.

Harry and Kathryn remember the days of mule farming before the tractor as if they were yesterday.

"I liked mules much better than horses," Harry says with conviction.

"Besides their feet are smaller."

Even after mechanization came, one favorite was kept for the garden and tobacco.

Harry and Kathryn get into a bit of a brief debate if that was Sam or Jack.

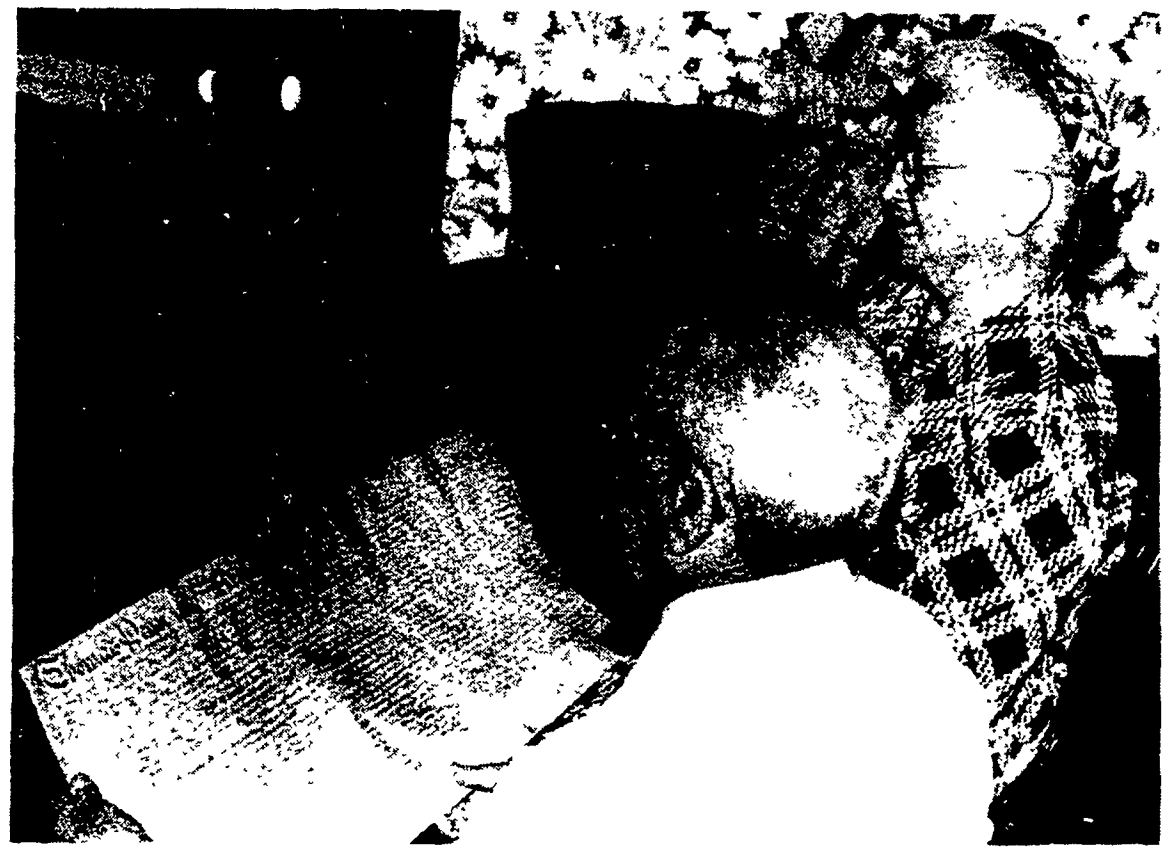
And even off the farm, the Herrs still live history.

A favorite pasttime is participation in activities of the Red Rose Antique Car Club.

With top down they can be seen in a 1968 Classic Buick convertible or the shiny maroon 1938 Buick Straight Six.

Rising behind Harry G. and Kathryn E. Herr is a Holly tree, one of the biggest for this latitude and likely more than 200 years old.

Sitting in front of fireplace that was built for Potter County deer head, Harry and Kathryn Herr look over original sheepskin deed from the Penns.



Sheepskin deed begins: "Thomas Penn and Richard Penn..."

Cassel farm

Marlin, owns the adjoining farm which was purchased by their grandfather in 1941.

John's grandfather quit farming in 1954 leaving young John with the operation. John's father, Walter, never owned the Cassel homestead in the interim.

Passing on the family farm to the next generation of Cassels may have to involve a name change on the deed since John and Lorraine's family consists of three daughters — Sherry, Debra, and Mary Jo.

Although all three of the daughters help out on the farm, Lorraine said she doesn't feel they have the inclination to farm for a career.

"When we still had the dairy farm, two of the girls would go out to the barn early each morning, leaving one to sleep in. Now, with the hogs, they are up at 2:30 in the morning loading hogs. And when their father gets back 2½ hours later from Allentown, they go out to the barn again, come back to the house, shower and go to work at S. Clyde Weaver's meats in East Petersburg."

With a smile, Lorraine pointed out that her daughters aren't dating farm boys, so she doesn't look for them to stay on the farm. But she said their jobs keep them in touch with agriculture. Lorraine also works off the farm at Root's Auction.

Today the Cassel farm has grown from its original 92½ acres to 115 acres, of which 110 acres are tillable. The fertile ground is used in growing corn to be fed to hogs these days, although in years past it was much more diversified in order to provide feed for the dairy cattle.

John said he had tried growing soybeans for about six years, but gave up after developing a relentless weed "headache."

In 1978, John installed an on-farm dryer to store his shelled corn. After grinding, the corn is combined with commercial soybean meal and minerals in a 9:1 ratio and fed to shoats that are brought to the farm.

Lorraine, who was born and raised in Ephrata, Lancaster County, summed up the family's feelings for the farm when she said with commitment, "It's a wonderful way of life. I've always liked every aspect of it. I love country living — as a matter of fact, it would be more difficult to go back to living in town than it was getting married and moving to the farm."

A relic of the past is this old water pump and trough. Getting a drink from that "fountain" would work up a real thirst.

Lorraine Cassel recalled the time when an accidental fire almost sent the farm's smokehouse up in flames. Now the Cassels have restored the "fire corner" as a cozy addition, complete with copper and iron kettles hanging in the walk-in fireplace.

Supermates! film stresses strong partnership

DES MOUNES, Iowa — "Supermates! The Farm Wife: Key to Success and Happiness" is the newest tape recording in a series of interviews with Hiram M. Crache, noted historian, consultant, and author of four books on American Agriculture.

"The wife is much more crucial in motivating the farm family and determining attitudes than anyone thought before," reports Drache, He bases this and his other informative findings on the farm wife on extensive interviews conducted with more than 300 innovative farmers and their wives.

Drache, who has appeared on NBC-TV's Today Show as an authority on agriculture, is interviewed by Bill Brantley in the hour-long tape.

In his interviews of innovative farmers, Drache found that 68% said the most important event in their farming career was their marriage. "The wife's attitude pervades the whole farming operation, and her involvement in the decision-making may determine success or failure. If she is instrumental in decisions and operations affecting the farm, chances are much greater for success of the farming venture," adds Drache.

Drache feels the wife's role is so crucial that he no longer interviews the husband alone.

Among the many topics discussed in "Supermates!" is what the future will hold for the farm wife and how she should prepare for her role as in "innovative" farm wife. Drache lists and discusses the traits a farm wife needs to help her family be more successful in farming; plus discusses the characteristics needed by women aspiring to become better farm wives.

The Supermates! tape makes ideal listening for farm couples who want to improve family relationships; and for young persons who plan to enter farming or work with farm people.

Agri-business persons, educators, lenders, professional people or anyone who deals with farm families in these challenging times can gain valuable insights into how to better deal with them by hearing Drache's latest interview.

Supermates! is the third in a series of recorded interviews with Drache. The other two are "The 6Ms required for Success in Farming," and "Understanding Large and Small Farm Customers."

All three tapes are available through Bill Brantley & Association, Inc., Box 65395, West Des Moines, Iowa 50265.

Klippenstein, Wingert to head Polled Hereford board

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Polled Hereford breeders Glen Klippenstein of Maysville, Mo., and George Wingert of Ottawa, Kan., have been elected chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the board of directors fo the American Polled Hereford Association.

Their elections occurred this week during the 60th National Polled Hereford Convention-Show-Sale held during the American Royal Livestock Show in Kansas City, Mo. New directors assuming four-year terms on the board are Curtis DuVall of DuVall Ranches, Granada, Colo.; James Upfield of Meridian Creek Ranch, Meridian, Texas; and Danny Ross Ingram of Circle I Ranch, Water Valley, Miss.

Klippenstein, 45, is partner-manager of Glenkirk Farms in Maysville. He grew up on a livestock homestead in Canada, but was educated in Pennsylvania. He graduated from Penn State where he was named Mr. Agriculture, and in 1980 he was named Penn State's Outstanding Alumnus. In 1966, together with partner Kirk Pendleton, Klippenstein founded Glenkirk Farms. In its 16 years of operation, Glenkirk has had 11 successful production sales, led out six national champions and five national reserve champions, and has sold cattle and semen into 46 states and 16 other countries. Today the Glenkirk partnership includes Ivan Kanak, who joined the group in 1972.

Klippenstein is a sought-after speaker and beef cattle judge, and

Local gov'ts receive $480,000 in game funds

HARRISBURG More than $480,00 has been distributed to county treasurers and political subdivisions by the Pennsylvania Game Commission this year.

The payments to local governmental units were made in lieu of taxes for State Game Lands throughout the state. There are more than 1,240,000 acres of Game Lands in Pennsylvania.

Game Commission funds provide a total of 39 cents for each acre of Game Lands to local governmental units. Of the 39 cents per acre, 13 cents is presented to the county, another 13 cents is forwarded to the local school district, and the remaining 13 cents goes to the township board of road supervisors.

Funds for the purchase of State Game Lands and for the payments made to local governmental bodies in lieu of taxes are made available through the sale of Pennsylvania hunting licenses.

Local governmental units do not expend any money whatsoever to maintain State Game Lands. In fact, the presence of State Game Lands greatly enhances the local economy and well-being of the citizens generally.

Game Lands hold in trust valuable open space, protect watersheds and water supplies and create conservation areas in addition to providing hunting and trapping and many other outdoor recreational opportunities, all at no cost tot the non-hunting public.

There are 272 State Game Lands in Pennsylvania. They are located in 65 of the 67 counties in the Commonwealth.

Polled Hereford

has traveled throughout North America as well as South America, Australia and Africa. He was elected to the APHA board of directors in 1979 and has served as vice chairman since February 1982. Glen and his wife, Linda, have three sons and one daughter. All of the Klippenstein children are successfully showing Glenkirk cattle in junior shows and have started Polled Hereford herds of their own.

George Wingert started his family Polled Hereford operation, Wingert Stock Farm, 7 years ago and it has grown to a 2,000-acre, 300-cow farm. George and Jane Wingert's four children all own cattle and have an active role in the business.

Wingert has spent more than 25 years in the oil and farm implement business, but has a strong livestock background. He graduated from Kansas State University in 1953 with a B.S. in agriculture and journalism. While at KSU he was active in the collegiate 4-H Club, the livestock judging team and the meats judging team. Following graduation, he served in the U.S. Army Veterinarian Corps.

Since 1964 Wingert has been owner and president of Wingert Oil Co., the largest petroleum distributing company in Kansas, and he has held offices in many professional societies. From 1970 to 1978, he served in the Kansas House of Representatives, where he was involved in government organization and ways and means committees. He is presently a member of the Kansas Board of Regents. Wingert is the sale committee chairman for the Franklin County Fair and is a state director for the Kansas Polled Hereford Association. He was elected to the APHA board of directors in 1981.

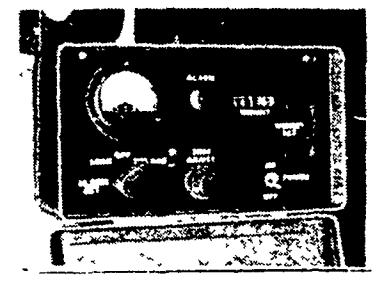
You can increase production. Reduce feed costs. And improve labor efficiency. All, when you use an Ensilmixer feed mixer, with scales, by Oswalt® to round out your Jamesway Total Mixed Ration (TMR) feeding system (including silage distributor-unloaders, conveyors and cattle feeders). Or, use it with any mechanized feeding system. Whether you prefer the stationary, trailer-mounted or truck-mounted model, it's a real profit-building management tool

Unique mixing pattern blends feed thoroughly. Three augers move feed from front to back and side to side. Reverse flighting at both ends lets feed fall freely for recirculation or discharge by the bottom auger. Uniformly mixes even partial loads

Precisely weighs ingredients. Accurate weighing means consistent, balanced rations; eliminates waste Lets you calculate the amount of feed needed and mix that much Weigh bar system is standard, electronic scales optional



That's why the Ensilmixer feed mixer, with scales, and TMR feeding system are right for you as well as your cattle And, can help make farming just a little bit better. Ask your Jamesway Power Choring dealer.

Father, daughter team up for Chianina wins

KILE — An Ohio father-daughter team paired up for major Chianina victories during KILE's Tuesday contest.

Doc and Jackie Flannery of High View Farm, Bellefontaine, Ohio found themselves in the winner's circle with the grand champion bull and heifer, respectively.

High View's "Silver Streak Romanus," a 2-year-old Romanus son bested the bull field for the grand champion title.

Jackie Flannery waltzed her February 1981 heifer, BF Miss Iroino, past judge Randall Reed's approving eye and captured the Grand Champion Heifer title.

The Flannerys had still another champion in their bull calf, BB Power Pack. The Blue Sky Navigator son earned the Reserve Champion Bull title.

Chiacres Carlena, a March 1981 heifer shown by Douglass Goodwin of Lewisburg, W. Va. moved into the Reserve Champion Heifer spot.

Dauphin County exhibitor Joseph Messick exhibited the reserve senior champion bull. Lake View Farm of East Berlin, Adams County, exhibited both the junior champion bull and the reserve champion bull calf. The reserve junior champion bull was shown by Galen Dreibelbis of State College.

MORE FOR LESS.

The Storage System for the future. Here Now!

THE AG-BAG SYSTEM

MORE FEED. MORE STORAGE. MORE HIGH QUALITY TDN & PROTEIN.

Select from three models of AG-BAG Machines. Motorized, Hydraulic, and Gear-Driven. AG-BAG lets you match the machine to your job. Big or small. Whether you're DAIRY or BEEF AG-BAG will store More For Less. The AG-BAG System. Air-tight storage with more versatility than any other system. Just look at these AG-BAG ADVANTAGES:

1. UNLIMITED oxygen-limiting storage
2. Storage for ALL forages & grain
3. Transportable
4. Easy to use and little maintenance
5. NO dangerous silo gases
6. Silo fires WON'T occur
7. Higher moisture forage
8. NO unloader to break down
9. Extra income and potential from custom bagging
10. THE Forage System for the 80's

JUST LISTEN TO WHAT THESE AG-BAG BELIEVERS HAVE TO SAY:

Kenneth Popham of Floresville, Texas

Kenneth runs a 465 cow Dairy and said this about AG-BAG: "At today's interest rates you can't afford any other type of storage . . Even with the yearly cost of bags it's still inexpensive storage . . a whole lot cheaper than building barns and hiring help. I put up 13 bags last year and after seeing the results, I'll put up 25 bags this year. The bags are a good thing."

Don Carter of Parkdale, Oregon

"The best move I ever made" . . . says Don Carter in reference to his switch to bagging silage on his dairy near Parkdale, Oregon.

"I get 18% more feed from the same acreage and the feed lasts three times as long. I used to clean my bunks after three days, now I only need to clean them after 10 days."

Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

"In addition to everything else, it's a management tool" . says rancher, Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

Roland farms 350 acres west of Blair, Nebraska, and fattens about 650 cattle from 600 lbs. to finish.

"By labeling every bag as to date and kind of feed, I can mix my feeds and eliminate the guess work in making a ration I feed alfalfa silage, corn silage and ground ear corn stored exclusively in the bags, purchasing only my minerals and vitamin supplements "

"The AG-BAG system has enabled me to increase carrying capacity per acre at a reduced cost of gain."

Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"At least 30% more feed . I can guarantee at least that" says rancher, Bert Anderson, of Sceptre, Saskatchewan.

"I've been able to cut my grain feeding costs in half since converting to the bagging It's just like feeding grass I've also eliminated the need for a liquid supplement that we always fed before going to the AG-BAG System . "

ASTM publishes guide to evaluate corn herbicides

PHILADELPHIA — The use of herbicides on corn has an effect on everyone from the researcher, to the farmer, and finally to the consumer.

In order to improve testing procedures, and to provide better information on the labels of herbicides in the market place, a standard, Guidelines for Evaluating the Usefulness of Herbicides on Corn, has been developed by Committee E-35 on Pesticides of ASTM, the internationally recognized standards-writing organization.

According to O. Hale Fletchall, chairman of E35.13 on Pesticides for Terrestrial Plant Growth Control, the subcommittee responsible for writing the standard, this document is the first of its type to be written by ASTM with the intent of evaluating pesticide labels, including herbicides.

"It was prepared in an effort to bring about a degree of uniformity and to encourage a sufficient quantity and high quality of data on which to base labels for herbicides, without stifling individuality among testers," he notes.

The standard, which includes procedures to help ensure that results from tests on simulated field plots will apply to actual farm situations, covers such factors as soil types, sprayer models, and herbicide information.

The information gained from testing would be used for determination of the value of a herbicide for use on corn; registration and labeling; and formulating recommendations to users of various herbicides.

A nonprofit organization with headquarters in Philadelphia, ASTM is the world's largest management system for the development of voluntary consensus standards for materials, products, systems and services. Standards documents are written by the more than 30,000 members of the organization. Subcommittee E35.13 is working on a similar standard document for soybeans.

For more information on this and other standards-writing activities, contact O. Hale Fletchall, University of Missouri, Department of Agronomy, 204 Waters Hall, Columbia, Missouri 65211; 314/882-2306; or Anne McKlindon, ASTM Standards Development Division, 1916 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19103, 215/299-5490.

UNIPEL® 13-34-10
fertilizer can get your corn crop off to a super start:

It has a high concentration of water-soluble Phosphorus that gets to young seedlings quickly. Helps plants establish a good root system—the starting point for top yields. Its quick-acting and long-lasting Nitrogen team up to feed the young plants for full yield potential, continually from sprouting to harvest.

This is the Starter Special that corn growers know from good experience. It's highly effective as a banded starter. And it's SAFE . . . no chance of ammonia damage to tender, young seedlings when used as a "pop-up" and applied directly with the seed at 50 lbs./acre.

How can we fit UNIPEL 13-34-10 into your corn fertility program?

Shorthorn breeders gear up for National

OMAHA, Neb. — The National Western Livestock Show in Denver, Co., will be the site of the 1983 National Shorthorn Show and annual meeting of the American Shorthorn Association, according to Jim Shirley, executive secretary-treasurer of the A.S.A.

Billed as the '83 National, Shirley said, this annual show will prove to be the toughest one of the season with Shorthorn cattle from across the nation competing for the Grand Championship honors.

Alan K. Sears, activities director for the A.S.A., said Shorthorn activities will begin on Thursday morning, Jan. 13, when Dave Hawkins, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Mi., will judge the junior Shorthorn heifer show.

Jan. 14 will be the show of cattle entered in the National Shorthorn Seedstock Special at the Stadium Arena, Sears continued. The evening of the 14th, Shirley said, will be Shorthorn discussions — an informal discussion period at the Stouffer Inn geared to review the Shorthorn Performance Records and advertizing Shorthorn cattle.

The opening session of the A.S.A. annual meeting, Shirley said, will be held on Jan. 15 at the Denver Stouffer Inn headquarters for Shorthorn producers during the event. State delegates will review the past year's activities and plan for the future, he said. New members of the A.S.A. board of directors will be elected to fill the expiring terms of Don Stout, Kremlin, Ok., John Humphreys, Wolcott, In., and Richard Prentice, Fulton, Mo. Prentice is eligible for re-election to the board.

Sears said the National Shorthorn Seedstock Special Sale will be at the Beef Palace Auction Arena on the afternoon of the 15th, beginning promptly at 1:30 p.m. Animals consigned to this sale, he said, will be of only the highest quality. These animals were prescreened by a selection committee to insure the finest in Shorthorn cattle will be offered, he said.

That evening, Shirley added is the annual banquet at the Stouffer Inn. The featured speaker, he said, will be Dean F. Berkley, Ph.D., Indiana University, Bloomington, In. Other awards that will be presented will be the Sire of the Year, Outstanding American Junior Shorthorn Association member, crowning of the National Shorthorn Lassie Queen, and presentation of the A.S.A. board of directors and new A.S.A. officers.

The National Shorthorn Show will be Sunday, January 16 at the National Western Stadium Arena. This show, Shirley said, will see the best from across the United States competing for the Grand Championship honors. Always a tough show, the excitement will be high as judges Bill Able, Manhattan, Ks.; Don Cardey, Merced, Ca..; and Don Hutzel, Tiffin, Oh., evaluate and place the classes. Sears said the selection of best six head of the show will be held that evening prior to the evening rodeo performance.

The competition continues, Sears added, on Monday, Jan. 17 with the pen bull show in the Livestock Center Judging Arena. Don Cardey will judge this show. Exhibitors will once again see a tough show in the yards, Sears said.

Pa. increases 4-H enrollment this year

LANCASTER — Four-H enrollment in Pennsylvania increased by almost 4,000 during 1982. This means 91,000 boys and girls 8 through 19 years of age are now a part of this informal educational program.

Using four approaches, 4-H attracted 44,452 youth in 2,481 traditional 4-H clubs. In the cities these 4-H clubs offered animal projects such as rabbits, dogs and pets. Repair projects involving small engines helped 4-H'ers and their parents same money by keeping the family lawn mower running. Many youngsters learned in the traditional food preparation and preservation projects.

A second approach to 4-H occurred in schools. Scientific projects such as embryology enriched the curriculum in much the same way as 4-H founders expanded school curricula beyond the three R's to include practical things such as gardening and canning. School programs in 4-H are held both during free periods and after school. About 32,000 youth were enrolled in this category of 4-H.

Special interest groups are shorter-term 4-H programs concentrating on a single subject. Nutrition education and safety often characterize these programs which attracted 18,700 youth.

Finally, 244 boys and girls were in 4-H as individuals. Some were handicapped, some institutionalized. Others were without means to attend a 4-H meeting, so a parent served as a leader. No one project characterized this small group. They became involved in many things in their 4-H learning experience.

Now the astute reader will have added these figures and concluded the writer couldn't add because the figures totaled over 95,000. Why? Some members belonged to more than one group. The computer at the state 4-H office in the College of Agriculture at Penn State found these duplications and concluded there are 91,780 Pennsylvania youngsters in 4-H in 1982!

Numerous representatives of the farm and power equipment industry addressed the dealers on the challenges and problems that have faced the industry during the past couple of years. Among the principals at the four-day sessions were:

NEBA holds annual meetings

BY JANE BRESEE
Staff Correspondent

NORTH ORWELL — The people of the small community of North Orwell rolled out the red carpet for the 18th East Bradford Annual Dinner of NEBA, the Northeast Breeders Association, held Nov. 11, 1982.

Not only did the enthusiastic country people provide a family-style turkey dinner until all 80 in attendance were over-stuffed. A group from the North Orwell Community Church presented a comedy for entertainment called "A Week on the Farm" ending on a serious note with a hymn.

The president of the East Bradford local, Jeff Hale, also a lay preacher for the North Orwell Community Church, chaired the meeting and conducted the elections. The advisory committee elected were: Jeff Hale, William Brown and George Keiffer; Francis David, alternate voting delegate; Fred Wheaton, Guernsey breed representative; and Russell Jones, Holstein breed representative.

Jim Howard, local representative to the NEBA board, reported that income this past year from the cooperative was $3.5 million and the net margin was $800,000, an increase from last year. A new office building at the NEBA-Sire Power Inc. headquarters in Tunkhannock has been built over the past year, and 2,200 members visited there during Open House in September.

Lloyd Ebersole, assistant manager of NEBA and Sire Power, the featured speaker, reported that the 1982 Sire Summary placed Sire Power's bull, Chairman, at the top in the nation in TPI. He also congratulated the William Brown Family of Rome for having the high-selling entry in the Sire Power sale.

Ebersole stated that linear classification is the best thing that has happened in years to improve cattle breeding. He narrated several slide pictures of Sire Power bulls and their offspring and also explained how linear classification is done.

The West Bradford Neba annual meeting was held last evening at Alba Church near Troy.

Pa. soybean leaders to attend leadership conference

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Soybean farmer leaders from Pennsylvania will be attending a leadership conference in Wilmington, Delaware, this Monday and Tuesday, at the Hotel DuPont. This conference will be specifically for soybean farmer leaders from Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

DuPont Company, manufacturer of Lexone® Herbicide, is sponsoring this ASA-Lexone® Leadership Conference in cooperation with the American Soybean Association.

"Success on the farmland and as a farmer leader means success for agribusiness," said Homer Torbert, a Frederica, DE soybean farmer and conference chairman. "In that regard, DuPont is sponsoring this leadership conference to enhance soybean farmer leader knowledge and capabilities."

"DuPont and ASA each have an important role in keeping the soybean industry strong and dynamic," stated Dale E. Wolf, vice president of DuPont Biochemicals. "DuPont's sponsorship of the ASA-Lexone® Leadership Conference for these states and national soybean association directors and officers is a step in that direction."

The conference will commence with registration of attendees at 1 p.m., Nov. 22 and will conclude at approximately 12:30 p.m., Nov. 23. Conference sessions will include workshops on soybean export promotion, research and responsibilities of a soybean farmer leader. Wolf of DuPont will speak on agricultural leadership. Lodging and conference meals are courtesy of DuPont.

York Farm Credit holds annual meetings

By M. Elleen Graham

GETTYSBURG — Three new directors were elected at the 1982 Annual York Farm Credit Stockholders' Meeting held last week at the Gettysburg Sheraton Inn. The event was the second part of a sectional meeting, the first part having been held the night before in Carlisle.

Serving farmers in Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, Fulton, Perry and York counties, Farm Credit is a cooperative comprised of the Federal Land Bank Association and Production Credit Association of York. Each organization is governed by a board of five directors who are elected to three-year terms.

Two FLBA directorships were open this year, with Horace H. Waybright of R2 Gettysburg and Leroy R. Bupp, R2 Seven Valleys, winning the seats.

Ronald C. Allison, Chambersburg, was elected as a new director to fill the PCA vacancy.

Waybright, president of the FLBA of York, chaired the dinner meeting which was attended by 366 stockholders and a large number of guests.

Also elected were the 1983 nominating committees for both organizations, with Robert E. Smith, RI Shippensburg; Kenneth E. Agar, R3 Newville; and Roy L. Miller, Carlisle, taking the FLBA positions.

The PCA committee seats will be filled by Theodore H. Small, Chambersburg; Carl W. Lehman, Carlisle; and Ray E. Wingert, Chambersburg.

In a special referendum, stockholders also voted to change their annual meeting date to the spring of each year, with the next meeting slated for early spring 1984. The time and place will be determined by the boards of directors, and the terms of the directors will be extended accordingly.

In his annual directors' report, PCA Vice President Marlin E. Miller noted that during the past year the organization paid 7 percent interest to "A" stockholders, with a patronage refund of 1.78 percent on earned interest paid to all borrowers having active loans during the calendar year of 1981. That dividend totals $18,199.30, he said.

In addition, Land Bank directors declared a dividend of 4.5 percent to stockholders and holders of participation certificates of record as of Nov. 30, 1981, in the amount of $218,405, he reported.

Miller also announced the construction of two new Farm Credit offices: one to be completed by January 1983 at a site on Walnut Bottom Road in South Middleton Township, Carlisle; the other now under construction on a lot in Chambersburg which the Association has owned since 1974. It is slated for completion during the first quarter of 1983.

Beyond the need for more office space, Miller said the building projects were prompted by the organization's desire to improve service and convenience to its members and potential members and, "to enhance our image as the lender of first resort to the agricultural communities which we serve."

The FLBA board also agreed to refund a portion of the members' land bank stock and participation certificates. With the refund members will have to maintain stock equal to only 6 percent of their loan balance, he added. The checks will be mailed in December 1982, with a $50 minimum refund.

"Membership participation is the lifeblood of a cooperative," stated Farm Credit General Manager Robert E. Vinson as he opened his 1982 management report.

Vinson noted the decline in the amount of long term loans made by the FLBA in 1982, describing the decrease as the "Farmer's belt-tightening response" to the economic climate of the last few years.

A decrease in the number of short-term loans made by PCA reflects farmers' reluctance to take on additional indebtedness for farm equipment, facilities or livestock, he said.

During the past year, Vinson noted, Production Credit short-term interest rates have ranged from 16¾ percent to 13¼ percent and long-term interest rates for the FLBA were 13 to 12½ percent, with additional fees offsetting greater interest costs.

He forecast continued high interest rates for the next few years and advised the members to replace the "indebtedness strategy" of the '70s with new ideas. "Put more emphasis on marketing your products rather than just selling them," he said.

Vinson also noted an intensive self-training program now being used by Farm Credit loan officers and management personnel to help them in making credit decisions.

Jeff Tyson, a York Farm Credit employee, received a 5-year pin.

The elections were chaired by J. Ross McGinnis, Esq., and entertainment was provided by the Red Rose Four.

York Land Bank elects officers

BY BETH HEMMINGER
Staff Correspondent

CARLISLE — As the organ player played a cheery tune, the York Federal Land Bank Association and Production Credit Association members gathered for an evening of food, entertainment and business at the Embers Restaurant, Carlisle, last week.

There were several business matters at hand at the annual meeting. The members voted on several nominating committees and directors for both Associations.

Ronald Allison of Chambersburg was re-elected to his position of director of the Production Credit Association, as were Horace Waybright and Leroy Bupp who were re-elected to their directors positions in the Federal Land Bank Association.

Winning the election for the 1982 nominating committee of the Stockholders Meeting was Theodore Small, Chambersburg; Carl Lehman, Carlisle; and Ray Wingert, Chambersburg.

Winning the votes to be members of the nominating committee for the Federal Land Bank Association meeting was Robert Smith, Newville; Roy Miller, Carlisle; and Kenneth Agar, Newville.

General Manager, Robert Vinson, closed the meeting with a few brief comments. Vinson gave a glimmer of hope to all the members saying that he believes their will still be high interest rates in the future, but not nearly as high as in the past few years.

Vinson encouraged the members to work on a positive cash flow in the farming businesses and to build a good working relationship with their lender, the Associations. Vinson closed the meeting by challenging the members to get involved in their Associations and learn what the Association and the member can do for each other.

York Buser earns American Farmer degree

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORKANA — York County's newest FFA American Farmer degree winner is one of a diminishing number of young farmers: one who can count dairy farmers, as far back as he knows, on both sides of his "pedigree."

"As far back as I can remember, both my Dad and Mom's families have been in dairy farming," says Bob Buser, a crease furrowing his forehead as he mentally checks off back through his ancestry.

So it's not surprising that this outgoing 21-year-old is currently buying — "the bank and I," he interjects — the 100-head Holstein herd from his parents, Bill and Pat Buser. About 20 breeding age heifers, 25 head of young stock and a few bulls raised yearly for custom meat sales round out the dairy herd inventory of Bob and his wife, Diane.

Rolling herd average on the herd is near 16,000 with 510-fat on a 3.5-percent test. Production is shipped to Rutters' Dairy in York.

It wasn't until he was a sophomore in high school, enrolled in Eastern's vo-ag program, that Bob Buser really took a great interest in the milking herd. When his dad suffered a serious tractor accident while cleaning out a fencerow, Bob stepped in to take over a large part of the milking.

By his senior year, Buser knew dairying was what he wanted to do with his life. With a Production Credit loan, the FFA'er purchased a dozen cows of a herd from Hagerstown, Maryland, that his dad was acquiring for the R12 York farm. In May of 1981, he and Diane began their purchase of the full herd.

"I figure a farmer that's not in debt isn't a farmer," philosophizes the young dairyman.

Like most other milk producers, Buser laments that his biggest single problem is getting cows bred back. After studies with nutritionists on the reproductive problem, Buser is now adding beta carotene to feed rations. Carotene is the compound that adds yellowish color to vegetables like carrots, and converts to Vitamin A in the system. Buser speculates that dry silage last year had lost its carotene compounds, causing a deficiency in the feed makeup.

Feed supplies for this winter look promising, according to Buser, since weather conditions worked to put up a "super" haylage crop. A 38-percent concentrate balances out rations that include high moisture corn and corn silage for milking animals, while dry cows get hay. Extra "fill in" forage, an insurance against shortages, is stored in plastic Ag Bag units.

Buser plans no expansion of his herd to fill the gap of the proposed 50-cent per hundredweight milk deduction set to go into effect Dec. 1. Instead, he hopes to continue improving the performance of the herd at its present size, culling hard on problem individuals and raising replacements with higher production potential.

Immediately following Bill Buser's critical accident, his physicians had warned that it would take years before he might walk. Defying medical predictions, the elder Buser was back in the field, planting corn, within months.

That arrangement, with Bob in the barn and his father on the equipment, set the framework for the present split-up of work chores. Bill continues to handle the bulk of cropping work on the 146-acre home farm, plus 450 rented acres in corn, hay and grains, with Bob purchasing his feed needs, and lending an occasional hand during peak field seasons.

One unique rotation crop being grown, however, was Bob's own idea. Curving around the farm's contours, in contrast to the somber, seasonal field tones, are 35 acres of thick, lush green leaves, tipped in lavendar-turnips.

With a half-acre planting in 1980, expanded to three acres last year, Buser's delighted with the turnip results. Seed cost is minimal, under $100 for the entire 35 acres, germination is nearly a hundred percent, and the crop requires no additional fertilizer. Turnip seed was drilled in August on fields where wheat had come off just weeks before. In two months, the first turnips were large enough to pull.

Buser is the major supplier of a Washington Boro vegetable wholesaler who ships the purple-tinged globes to retailers up and down the Eastern seaboard. A crew of local part-time pickers, headed by crew leader Harry Scott of Columbia, includes homemakers, vo-ag students, and area residents currently on strike or laid off from York area manufacturing plants.

To be acceptable for retailing, turnips may be no larger than "baseball" size. Anything larger — and with abundant rain turnips grow rapidly past that size — stays in the field as a cover crop, to be plowed down into the field as green manure.

A newborn Holstein calf and little Rebecca Buser seem to take great interest in one another, to the amusement of American Farmer winner Bob Buser, and his wife Diane.

According to Buser, crops following the turnip plantings yield better, often with less need for fertilizers due to the organic matter and nutrients put back in the soil by the vegetable remains.

"And if you can make a profit on them, it's a good deal," he figures.

In addition to the turnip plantings is a half-acre planted to potatoes for retailing locally. Either the Katahdin or Kennebec variety is favored for use by Buser's customers.

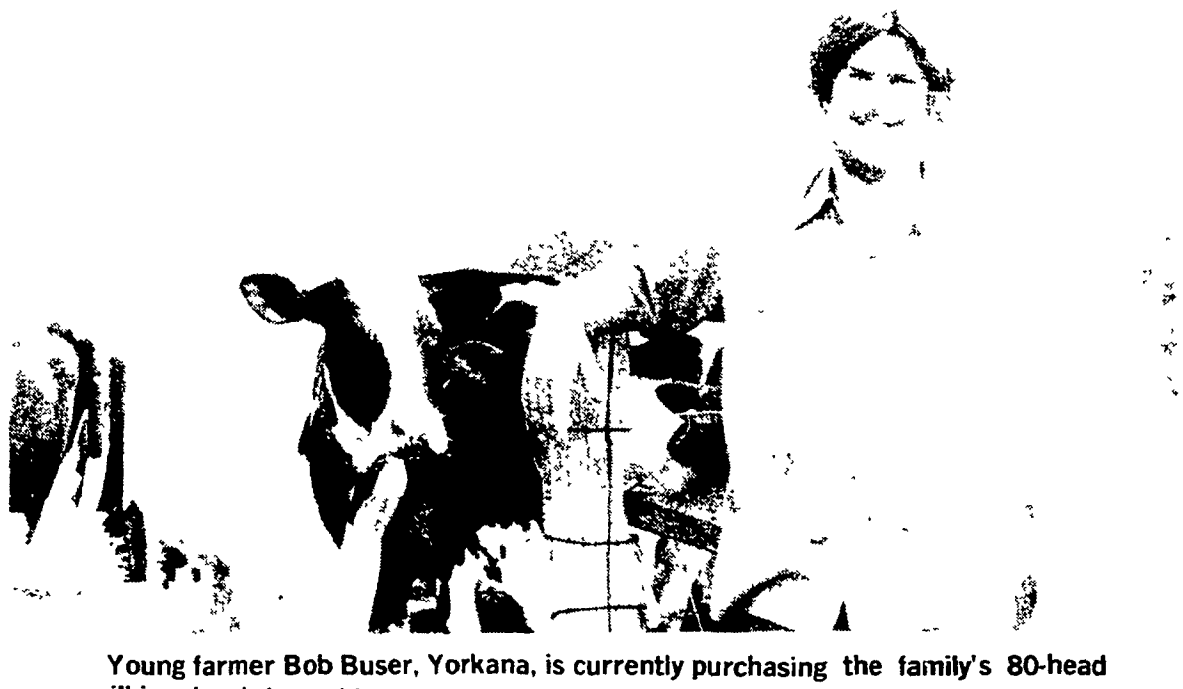
In partnership with his brother, Richard, Buser dabbles in yet another commodity, hogs. The pair has a small breeding herd of Yorkshires, eight sows and a boar.

Such diversity is in keeping with the practice Buser followed as an FFA'er in pursuing his vo-ag projects.

"I carried every project I could," he chuckles. That included anything from field crops to backyard gardening, and animal projects including dairy. Holding a chapter office nearly every year in the Eastern FFA, Buser was president his senior year. The previous year, he served as chapter secretary, and parliamentarian for the county chapter. In addition to winning all his degrees up to Keystone, Buser won the state's crop production award in 1979.

He gives credit for his farming know-how and success to his dad and to his vo-ag instructor Gerald Kiger, for what both have taught him about farming and record keeping. And it was with their help, adds Buser, that he was able to pick up his American Farmer degree last week in Kansas City.

While 35 acres of turnips is an unusual crop on a dairy farm, Bob Buser's sold on the value of the vegetable plantings as a second cash crop and soil booster in rotation with corn and wheat. Here he checks part of the day's pick with crew leader Harry Scott.



Young farmer Bob Buser, Yorkana, is currently purchasing the family's 80-head milking herd from his parents, and hopes someday to boost production toward the top of the county list.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent

Personal computers and farming

A year ago I was asked: "How soon will ordinary farmers be using computer?"

My answer was rather vague. I really didn't see anything that would make them adaptable to the average Pennsylvania farm or farmer.

There were some agricultural programs available, but most of them meant that the farmer-user would have to bend or adapt his use to the existing software (programs). In addition, it appeared that each use would require a separate program, which meant a lot of dollars. Finally they were too complicated.

In the past six months I've had to change my mind thanks to the persistence of a young co-worker who has become hooked on computers. He introduced me to Visi Calc. Suddenly even an "old dog" like myself found that I didn't have to go back to school to use a computer.

I also found that I did not have to go out and buy a lot of new software. This one program gave me the capability to write my own programs without having to learn computer language or anything new in math. What is more, Visi Calc is a program that has been written for most of the personal computers.

Visi Calc

With Visi Calc, you can do a farm analysis that is as complete as any I have run into done on large computers. What is more it can be personalized to more closely fit your operation. Furthermore it can be used to project the results of changes you may wish to make in your business.

Thinking of expansion? Just plug in the changed expenses, changed income, capital outlay, and changed labor. Result — a pre-analysis of what this would mean in profit to you.

It also can be used to make a projected or actual cash flow statement or analysis. This statement can be as simple or as complex as you desire. Do you want to look at cash return over cash expense, or do you want to look at the cash balance on a month by month basis?

Are you into budgets? With the Visi Calc program budgets of any type are easy to project, develop, or explore. At present your corn budget says you need $1.75 per bushel to break even on cash costs of producing corn at your yield level. What happens if nitrogen changes by 10 percent in price? Or what happens if yields go up or down? Five minutes with the computer will give you the new break even price (four of those five minutes is spent turning the computer on and putting the Visi Calc program into the computer.)

Amoritzation tables are a fourth use of Visi Calc. Do you need one for 16 percent interest for 5 years on an inter-family transaction?

Mason-Dixon P. Hereford Assn. plans show

FRIENDSVILLE, MD — At the last meeting of the Mason-Dixon Polled Hereford Association, the board of directors took action to hold its first annual show in conjunction with the 1983 Greater Cumberland Fair. The association president, Dr. William H. Buser, will be working with Kenneth Spielman, beef superintendent, and John Barton, president of the Cumberland Fair Board, to complete details for the show.

O. Randall Harman, vice-president of the board, discussed the spring sale of breeding stock to be held by the Association. May 14, 1983 at the Friends Livestock Auction building at Accident, Maryland.

In other action the group tabled a committee proposal designed to encourage the breeding and showing of Polled Hereford heifers. It is hoped the program will be rewritten to gain the approval of the board of directors.

Commercial cattlemen and breeders of registered Polled Hereford cattle interested in the activities of the association and/or membeship in the Association should contact: Brenda Jenkins, secretary, Star Route, Box 35, Friendsville, Md. 21531, phone 301-746-5321 or Dr. William H. Buser, president, P.O. Box 3025, Swanton, Md., 21561; Phone 301-387-6930.

NAILE posts junior dairy champs

LOUISVILLE, KY — IF it isn't quite tradition yet, it's certainly trending in that direction, as a young Tennessean recently captured blue ribbons for the second straight year in the Holstein Junior at the ninth annual North American International Livestock Exposition.

Brenda Nolan, of Franklin, Tn, guided her 4-year-old Mel-Star Dust to laurels for Senior Champion Female and Grand Champion Female. The Volunteer State was also honored with the Junior State Herd Award.

The trophy for the Best Animal Bred and Owned went to Shane Smithson of Ridgeville, IN.

Bryan W. Lund, of Norwalk, OH, monopolized Reserve honors, his 4-year-old Philbursons Paula Royal Red cornering the awards for both Reserve Senior Champion Female and Reserve Grand Champion Female.

More than 240 dairy cattle were entered in this year's Holstein Junior Show, which is open to entrants between the ages of 9 and 21. Premiums totaled $2,000.00 and were offered jointly by the North American International Livestock Exposition and the Kentucky Holstein Cattle Club.

Heather Housley, 12, of Riceville, Tn. and Charlotte Wachtel, 15, of Big Prairie, OH, earned top honors in the National Guernsey Junior Show.

The Grand Champion Guernsey Female went to Housley's 4-year-old cow, Housley's R Maude. The Grand Champ also received the Best Animal Bred and Owned award, given only to those who breed and raise the cow on their farm. Heather, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Housley, has been showing Guernseys for seven years. Her family owns a 600 head dairy operation.

Wachtel's Springwalk Hornets Pearl, a 5-year-old, received the Reserve Grand Champion Female award.

"This is probably the toughest competition," Wachtel said of the Guernsey show here, compared to other national contests. However, allergies of hay fever and animals haven't stopped her from showing Guernseys for the past nine years.

The Junior State Herd award went to Ohio, with Missouri second and Indiana third. Each state that participates has three entries shown. Linda Basse, 1982 National Guernsey Queen, was on hand to present the various class awards.

There were 123 entries in the Guernsey show representing 74 participants, an increase from last year's entries according to the Guernsey junior show superintendent Ed Wright of Saginaw, MI. Premiums of $3,000.00 were given out today with the American Guernsey Cattle Club and N.A.I.L.E. sponsoring them.

Two old pros won again at the 1982 Southern National Ayrshire Junior Show on Saturday.

Grand Champion and Best Animal Bred and Owned were awarded to the first place 3-year-old, Ray Knoll Jacks Jennifer, owned by Donald Eugene Baker, Jr., 20, of Lineboro, MD.

At last year's show, Jennifer was first place 2-year-old and Grand Champion and went on to be the first place 2-year-old in the open show.

Show judge and Jersey breeder, Pat Ott, Newman, GA, praised the cow for her "beautiful balance, attractive appearance and lovely udder."

Judge Ott chose another returning winner for Reserve Champion. Tower View Kellys Heather owned by Russell Lynn Isley, 19, Burlington, N.C., was first place in the 5-year-old and over class. "You've just got to admire this eight-year-old cow," Ott said.

Heather was Reserve Champion of the 1977 Junior Show and Grand Champion of the 1977 open show. She also has won Reserve All-American honors three times out of six nominations. Winning is not new to her.

Reserve Junior Champion went to the first place Intermediate Calf, Debonayr Merry Brook owned by Christy Wright, Spiceland, IN.

In Brown Swiss competition, John Varnell of Cleveland, Tenn., made his first trip to NAILE a memorable one. The 11-year-old son of William and Rebecca Varnell showed Dolly Stretch Charming to a grand championship. In addition, Varnell was a member of the winning Tennessee State Senior Herd.

The Keystone State was represented with a 17-member youth contigent in the junior Jersey show.

Sponsored by the Pa. Jersey Cattle Club, the group of top 4-H'ers combined for a six place in the junior show state herd and a ninth place in the open show. In all, [illegible] young Pennsylvanians competed against 20 states.

Another Pennsylvanian Kathy Reich exhibited her milking senior yearling Kathy's Golden Brown Muffin to a blue ribbon in the open show. The first-calf heifer earned second-best udder honors as well.

Measuring up

If you believe everything you read in the paper, you might have the feeling that American agriculture is slipping — that it is no longer the production marvel of the modern world. But don't be too quick to jump on the bandwagon. Agriculture is going through some difficult times from an economic point of view, but the final result will be a leaner, stronger agriculture that is even more productive than it was before.

In the meantime, our farmers are out-producing the farmers of the world by a wide margin. Oh sure, you can find a few commodities in some countries where America doesn't measure up. But, in general, we're way ahead. We produce more food with less time and with fewer people. That means American consumers spend less of their total income on food, and they are among the best fed people in the world.

A recent Wilmington Morning News editorial used some Department of Agriculture statistics to show that American farmers are being out-done by the French. The editorial writer used those figures to draw the conclusion that France is beating us "all hollow" on yield-per-acre of wheat. That writer then drew a parallel between French farming and Japanese manufacturing, pointing out that our wheat farmers are only half as productive as French wheat farmers.

There are a few simple reasons why French farmers grow more metric tons per hectare than do American farmers. Beyond that, there's a lot more to agriculture than tons of wheat per hectare.

The USDA data indicate that the French are more than twice as productive per hectare on the average when compared to American farmers. But let's look a little deeper. The French grow four-and-a-half million hectares of wheat – we grow almost 29 million. And anybody who knows anything about growing wheat realizes that most of it is grown in the dryland regions of the West-areas where it's too dry to grow corn and soybeans, where wheat that is seeded in the fall and nourished with winter moisture can make it to harvest in June and July before the great summer droughts take their toll. And even then, yields are sometimes pitiful compared to wheat grown in more favorable climates.

Vast acreages of American wheat are grown in places so dry that a crop survive every other year. That means the land is fallowed or stands idle for a year, soaking up any available moisture for a crop the next year.

Wheat is grown in some states where moisture is more plentiful, but even then it doesn't get prime land or prime consideration. If it grows on highly fertile ground at all, it's simply because it's part of a rotation, or occasionally when the price is truly favorable a farmer will devote prime land to wheat. But it usually doesn't pay that well, so it's relegated to less fertile soils and land that is otherwise not suited to corn and soybeans.

Converting hectares and metric tons to acres and bushels is not the easiest job in the world, but I think I've done it successfully. The USDA data converts to a U.S. national average yield for wheat of 33 bushels per acre. That's not very good. Locally, we do a little better than that — somewhere in the neighborhood of 40 bushels per acre. And there are other parts of the country where wheat yields are substantially higher. Certainly the best wheat growers in this country are capable of matching French yields.

Now let's consider French agriculture. Small farms, large amounts of labor, much individual care, and an almost overwhelming system of government subsidies. That means farmers don't necessarily grow what is the most economical, but rather what returns them the best income when government payments are considered.

Wheat happens to be a big crop. So are grapes for making wine. But what about corn, soybeans, grain sorghum, cotton, peanuts, rice, and on down a long list of agricultural commodities that do so well in this nation?

Looking at the overall picture and using USDA and United Nations data, American agriculture compares convincingly with French farming. Two percent of our population feeds all of our people and provides a mountain of food for people in other countries. That compares with 10 percent of the French population.

Our consumers spend 14 percent of their disposable income on food, compared with 19 percent in France. While the average American must work four minutes to earn a loaf of bread, the average Frenchman must work eight. So yield per hectare in France doesn't necessarily convert to lower bread prices.

It's not difficult to find specific commodities that are produced in greater abundance per acre in some other nations; but at what cost in human effort, and at what price to the consumer? When it comes to efficiency, American agriculture remains unchallenged. We have the land, the climate, the technology, and the system. They all come together to make American farmers the most productive in the world. No other country is even close.

There's a wonderful system at work in this country that keeps agriculture strong. It starts with the profit motive and involves a tradition of family farming. That combines with the efforts of the Department of Agriculture, the agricultural colleges, the experiment station and extension services, and the vast agricultural industry to provide farmers with the latest in technology, in new machines, new seeds, new breeds, and the best in management know-how.

This combination has worked so well that farmers themselves are now starting to doubt it. They're wondering why they need so much efficiency, why agricultural research needs to continue, and why they wouldn't be better off if they were less productive. In the short run, they make a valid point, but when you look at the overall picture you must come to the conclusion that it's in America's best interest to maintain the most productive agriculture possible. To do that, we must continue in the directions of the past three or four decades.

Some farm people are going to be squeezed and they're not going to like that, but efficiency of production is what it takes to keep us all well fed and to provide the surpluses necessary to feed hungry people in other nations. That ability means more to the overall stability of this nation and to its long-term goals than almost anything else you can mention.

So French farmers out-produce us in their little back yard wheat plots, but we bury them in our total volume and we scoff at them in their inefficiency. After all, there's really no relation between the USDA figure that compares yield-per-hectare and the true efficiency of that production. It may be a measure of performance, but it's not a measure of efficiency.

Federal courts declare windfall profits tax unconstitutional

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — Farm Bureau attorneys played a key role in a recent federal court decision declaring the windfall profits tax unconstitutional.

Friend of the court briefs and oral arguments by attorneys from the American Farm Bureau Federation and the Wyoming Farm Bureau, and a friend of the court brief filed by the Texas Farm Bureau figured strongly in the decision in which a federal district court in Cheyenne ruled against the tax on the grounds that an exemption for Alaskan producers violated the constitutional requirement that excise taxes be levied uniformly throughout the nation.

AFBF General Counsel John Rademacher explains that the windfall profits tax, an excise tax enacted in 1980 to siphon off additional profits resulting from federal decontrol of oil prices, strongly impacted on farmers and ranchers who had leased their land to oil producers.

Farm Bureau attorneys expect the government to appeal the decision, and until its review by a higher court the government will be permitted to collect the tax.

Hereford steer champ wins scholarship for owner

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Two previous winners, Brian Orth, Liberty, Mo., and Julie Tucker, Mullen, Neb., returned to capture the grand and reserve grand champion honors in the $8,000 special Hereford-Polled Hereford steer show held at the American Royal Livestock Show in Kansas City.

Forty-nine entries representing 11 states competed in the terminal show. Forty percent of the final placing is derived from the live placing and 60 percent of carcass qualities of the steers. The live placings were made by Bill Able, Kansas State University, Manhattan.

At this year's event, a crowd estimated at nearly 1,000 persons was on hand, one of the largest at any American Royal breed event. This marks the fifth year for the show sponsored by the American Hereford Association, American Polled Hereford Association and American Royal Livestock Show.

Brian Orth, who captured the grand champion honor in 1980, returned to claim the top prize. The entry was sired by JHF Prospector 933 out of a registered cow sired by CH Domino 439. He was bred by Buell Jackson & Sons, Mechanicsville, Ia., and Trimble, Mo.

He was one of the youngest steers in the show at 410 days of age, yielding a carcass weight of 684 pounds, a 2.1 yield grade, and an impressive $2.00 carcass value per day of age. He stood fourth in class with the second highest live weight-per-day-of-age in the show at 2.79 and second highest carcass WDA at 1.66.

Brian was awarded $3,000 by Southgate Bank and Trust, Overland Park, Ks., and shared in $1,500 "on hoof" premiums and $2,000 in carcass premiums given by sponsoring organizations.

The reserve grand champion steer exhibited by Julie Tucker was sired by BLR Mont Domino 6127, bred by Lovejoy Herefords, Valentine, Neb., out of a commercial Hereford dam. This steer earlier stood sixth in his on-hoof class with a WDA of 2.68 pounds. He was 401 days of age, had a carcass weight of 653 pounds, and a cracass WDA of 1.62, choice quality, and a $1.99 retail value per day of age. Julie previously exhibited the reserve champion at the 1981 show. She received a special carcass premium of $2,000.

All steers qualifying in the final placings with a high good quality score and a yield grade 2 carcass or better received $5 per hundredweight of carcass from the Lewis Double EE Ranch, Athol, S.D.

In addition to the special premiums, the two breed associations awarded $200 and $125 to the exhibitors of the grand and reserve grand champions, respectively, with the breeders of the steers receiving $100 and $75, respectively. The carcass results showed 78 percent of the steers entered had a yield grade of 1 or 2.

Placing third on the final index was Beth Hinderks, Amity, Mo. The entry was sired by GK Beau Victor 214G and bred in the herd of Roger Hinderks, Amity, Mo. The steer posted a 619-pound carcass at 406 days of age to yield a carcass WDA of 1.52, giving him a $1.87 carcass value per day of age.

For the second time in three years, Brian Orth, Liberty, Mo., captured the grand champion honors in the $8,000 special Hereford-Polled Hereford steer show held during the American Royal in Kansas City. Orth's grand champion was 410 days of age, had a carcass weight of 684 pounds, a 2.1 yield grade, and a $2.00 carcass value per day of age. # Egypt, Yugoslavia get blended export credit

WASHINGTON, DC — Secretary of Agricuture John R. Block has announced blended credit has been approved for the sale to Yugoslavia of U.S. cotton and to Egypt of U.S. wheat, vegetable oil and corn.

He said the credit packages, with a combined total of $170 million, will open the way for the sale by private U.S. exporters of nearly a million tons of U.S. agricultural commodities that would not have been sold without the new credit program, which was announced Oct. 20.

"Additionally — sales beyond what we could have expected — has been our primary objective," Block said, "and we are very pleased with the results."

Under the program, interest-free direct government export credits are blended with government-guaranteed private credits to produce a lower interest rate. A total of $100 million of direct credit and $400 million in credit guarantees has been authorized for the first year of the 3-year, $1.5 billion program.

The Egyptian credit package of $22 million of direct credit and $88 million of credit guarantees was approved for the sale of 500,000 tons of wheat, 300,000 tons of corn, and 50,000 tons of vegetables oil.

Each of these sales represents an increase over previously estimated import totals from the United State, Block said. The U.S. share Egyptian wheat imports, which are estimated to total 4 million tons in marketing year 1982/83, will rise from 1.9 million tons to 2.4 million tons; that of vegetable oil will go from 160,000 tons to 210,000 tons. Total Egyptian oil imports are pegged at 325,000 tons.

Block said Egypt had been expected to import 1.2 million tons of corn this year, all from the U.S., and the blended credit will boost that to 1.5 million tons.

The package for Yugoslavia makes available $12 million of direct credit and $48 million of guaranteed credit for the purchase of 184,000 bales of U.S. cotton.

"This will be the first substantial sale of U.S. cotton to Yugoslavia since the marketing year 1968/69," Block said. "That shows what this program can do."

He said Yugoslav cotton imports this year are estimated to total 460,000 bales. The first credit under the program was announced Oct. 29, making available $140 million for the sale to Morocco of 1.1 million tons of wheat.

Blended credit proposals from several more countries remain under consideration, Block said, with decisions on approval due soon.

showed the fourth-place entry on a home-bred steer sired by SHR L1 Domino 239 and out of a registered dam. His carcass weighed 784 pounds with a WDA of 1.52 and a retail value of $1.69.

Lisa Handel, Scotland, S.D., exhibited the fifth-place steer, sired by Arrow CL1 Dom 839 and bred by Myron Hoeckle, Pingree, N.D. His carcass tipped the scales at 751 pounds for a carcass WDA of 1.51 and a retail value per day of age of $1.82.

Officials sponsoring the Kansas City-based breed show pointed out that the steers qualifying for the final index were young, efficient and high yielding, reflecting the needs of today's market. These steers yielded an average carcass WDA of 1.33 pounds and, based on the current market prices, the average carcass value per day of age of $1.59.

Heald addresses DHIA seminar

ELLENVILLE, N.Y. — Mastitis robs the nation's dairy industry of more than $2 billion a year, said dairy Extension specialist William Heald during the recent Northeast Testing Conference here.

Heald said at any given time, 50 percent of the dairy cows in the U.S. suffer from the infection.

"Mastitis is, no doubt, an enormous problem," said the Penn State specialist. "Most farmers know about mastitis, but they don't realize the extent to which mastitis affects them economically."

Estimates show, Heald said, the typical farmer is losing $200 per cow per year. In Pennsylvania, where dairy herds average 55 cows, the loss can be more than $10,000 a year.

Despite this, many losses go unnoticed by the dairy farmer, Heald said. He noted two reasons for this. First, mastitis often shows no outward symptoms. Second, afflicted cows often continue to produce milk that appears normal, and, even though they produce in smaller amounts, the farmer is nonetheless misled.

"Dairy farmers detect only 1 percent of the cases," Dr. Heald said. "The symptoms have to be obvious: inflamed udders, milk that's bloody or too watery."

To correct this, researchers, during the 1970's, developed an improved method for detecting mastitis. The method, somatic cell counting, involved counting leukocytes (white blood cells) and secretory epithelium (milk-producing cells) in the cow's milk.

The higher the count, said Heald, the greater the loss in milk production.

C. William Heald

Early detection of mastitis makes it possible for farmers to act more quickly, and, hence, to save money.

Mastitis occurs when bacteria in the udder of the cow release toxins that kill the milk-producing cells. The toxins and bacteria are subsequently attacked by white blood cells.

Heald explained some cows lose as much as 20 percent of their milking potential because of mastitis. Such a loss, he stressed, can be devastating to a farmer.

Only recently, through research done by Heald and colleagues of his from other universities, have scientists been able to predict milk losses accurately. This increases the dairy farmer's awareness of the problem. Sound management practices, he added, can help to curb the number of mastitis cases.

"An environment that's clean and dry is a must," he said. "It's bacteria that trigger the infection, and bacteria can't survive unless there is filth and moisture."

Heald recommended that antibiotics be infused in the cow's udder during non-milking periods. It is during the first week of the dry period that cows are more likely to become infected.

Heald stressed that farmers should keep the teats of a cow free of bacteria. This can be done by cleansing the teats in a sanitizer, and by maintaining clean milking equipment.

"The equipment is what comes in contact with the cow," he said. "Milking equipment is used more hours each day than a tractor, yet, in spite of this, the tractor usually gets more attention."

Browncroft tops Bradford

WYSOX — The Bradford County DHIA cosed its 69th year with two separate meetings on Nov. 8 and 9 and the Wysox Fire Hall and Troy Senior High School cafeteria.

William and Janet Brown, Rome, finished at the top of the list as their 28 Browncroft Holsteins averaged 23,527 pounds of milk and 900 of butterfat.

An honorary plaque was awarded to Duane and Patty Cole of Columbia Cross Roads for the lowest average somatic cell count, (90,000) in the county.

Bradford County's 18,433 cows finished the year with an average of 14,901 pounds of milk and 562 pounds of fat.

Poultry, beef farm in Witmer family 108 years

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON BORO — The farm of Donald W. and Joan Witmer, R 1, Washington Boro, has been in their family for 108 years, and was honored as a century farm this week at the Ag - Industry banquet.

Poultry and beef farmers, the Witmers have deeds for the land not only for the time it was in their family, but for a short time preceding that.

The earliest Witmer relative to live on the land in Manor Township was Christian Ament, who purchased 69 acres and 123 perches from Peter W. Hiestand, a dentist, and his wife. Christian Ament was Donald's great, great grandfather, and he paid $12,209.53 for the acreage.

Donald says, "This doesn't sound cheap." He speculates that since the price of land goes in cycles, perhaps his forebear purchased the land during a time of high land value.

From Christian, the land went to his son and daughter, Eli Ament, Donald's great grandfather, and Elizabeth MacDonald and her husband. Eli eventually purchased Elizabeth's share. Donald later remarked that Eli owned quite a lot of land in the neighborhood.

It was following Eli that the name changed, when Walter M. Witmer married Eli's daughter Ada and purchased the farm. Ada was Donald's grandmother and she is now 89 years old, living nearby close to Ament's hardware store, another branch of the family.

Walter passed away when Donald's father, Walter was just 10 years old, but Ada kept the farm in the family, having it farmed on shares through the years. "Dad started full time when he was 16 and he eventually bought it in 1959," Donald says.

He added that his grandmother Ada Witmer Gray, since remarried, still stands at Southern Market each week. Her father Eli "always went to market," according to Donald. He also built a greenhouse on the property and paid for the back part of the house in one year from the proceeds from the greenhouse.

In 1976, Donald and Joan purchased the farm from his parents and they now live there with their four children: Kevin, 10; Kathy, 7; Amanda, 4; and Wendy, 2.

Joan says, "Kevin says he wants to be a farmer. He says, "I'm going to live here." That, of course is good news for the Witmers as far as the future of the homestead.

Earlier deeds show that the farm was once larger, but was split in 1825 to settle an estate. The earliest deed in the possession of the Witmers shows that the land was owned by Adam Doerstter and was sold to Adam Shuman, who married Chatarina Doerstter. There are papers showing that Shuman paid $49.98 yearly in interest for the land.

It was Adam Shuman who built the house in which the Witmers live, the oldest building on the property. There is no datestone, but they assume he built it within the first four years after obtaining the ground, approximately 1830.

The bottom part of the home is log, and the top part is studded, leading Witmer to believe that it was once a one story home but was increased in size as needed. Eli built an addition to the house in 1885.

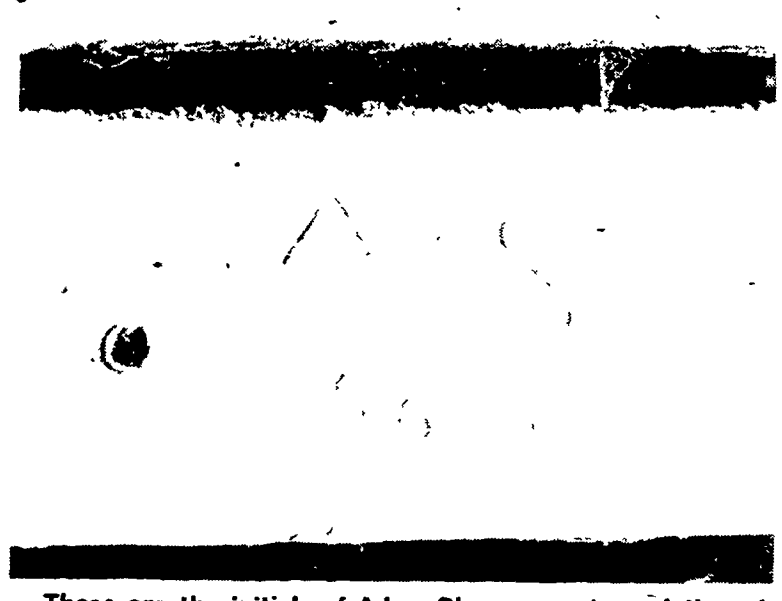
They think the barn on the property dates from 1840 or 1850, and the corn crib was probably built in 1867 since it boasts Adam Shuman's initials and the date.

The farm has always been in general farming, according to Donald, with the barn used as a cow stable, a steer stable and a horse stable.

Now Donald and Joan have 17,000 breeder pullets and about 100 steers. They raise 200 acres of corn and 30 acres of tobacco along with other small grains. Just 49 acres of the farm are from the original family farm. They rent an additional 220 acres.

The Witmers are proud of the award they received. Donald says, "It's interesting to see the families that have passed down through the generations."

With their appreciation of family history, of course, they are hopeful that the original 49 acres will remain in their own family for a long time in the future.



These are the initials of Adam Shuman, not a relative of Donald and Joan Witmer, but a previous owner of the farm. He carved his initials and the date on the corn crib wall, which apparently dates from 1867.

Donald and Joan Witmer, R1 Washington Boro, look over some of the old deeds and documents that pertain to their farm. There are 49 acres which date from 1874, making it 108 years since the first member of their family purchased the farm.

Irish Creek General Sandman, the only Pennsylvania animal selected for the recent All American Jersey Sale in Louisville, Ky, collected a $9,300 bid from NOBA, an Ohio-based breeding syndicate. Consigned by Berks County breeders Robin and David Phillips, the yearling bull is by of Starn General and out of Sunset Ridge Secret Sandy, Ex-90 with records to 17,380 pounds of milk and 845 of fat.

The Donald and Joan Witmer farm, R1 Washington Boro, has been in the family for over 108 years. The Witmers pose here with their two oldest children, Kevin, 10, and Kathy, 7. The home in the background probably dates from 1830 and the barn from 1840 or 1850.

Del. grain marketing workshop

NEWARK, Del. — A grain marketing workshop to help Delaware farmers make more profitable marketing decisions has been scheduled for Friday, Dec. 3, at the Sheraton Inn in Dover. The program, which will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., is being sponsored by the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service and Merrill Lynch.

Purpose of the workshop is to show growers how to reduce price risks and increase profits from their 1983-84 grain crops. Two market analysts with extensive experience in the grain trade have been engaged as keynote speakers.

Leading off the morning program will be Ben George, a member of the Chicago Board of Trade with direct access to the trading floor. George has considerable experience in livestock marketing and has spent 10 years in commodities marketing — five as an account executive, and five in his current position as grain analyst for Merrill Lynch. His analyses are heard daily throughout the U.S. On the firm's in-house wire service. He will speak on the outlook for feedgrains.

Next on the program will be Terry Barr, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's economic analysis staff in Washington, D.C. Formerly with the department's World Outlook Board, one of Barr's current duties is to clear the outlook statements issued by USDA. He will discuss the outlook for oilseeds.

Others on the program include Richard Lester, executive director of Delaware ASCS, reviewing the 1983 federal feedgrain and wheat program; Merrill Lynch account executive John Troth, on the use of basis charts in making marketing decisions; University of Delaware Extension crops marketing specialist Carl German, on earning returns on storage through hedging; and University of Maryland Extension economist and researcher Jack Wysong, on the cost of producing the 1983-84 crop. Wysong recently completed an economic analysis of production costs for grains on the Eastern Shore.

Deadline for registration is Nov. 26. A fee of $6 per person is required. Lunch is on your own. For further information contact German at 302/738-2511 or call the county Extension office in Newark, Dover or Georgetown.

Pigs that start fast finish faster.

We have proof: Pigs that start gaining early have more efficient gains — clear to market.

With High Octane® Baby Pig Chow® and High Octane® Pig Starter Chow® brand rations, we can help you get your pigs off to a running start. Both rations have the proper balance of amino acids and energy. Both are easily digested as sow's milk. And pigs love the taste.

Come see us for the proof on High Octane starter rations. After all — the faster they start, the sooner they finish!
